

RALPH McGILLCastro's
Communism

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—Adlai Stevenson, traveling recently across Latin America in serious conferences with concerned leaders, came back to say in his official report, just released, that the threat of Castro-communism is real.

It thrives, he said, "on urban slum conditions and rural insecurity. The poor in the cities and the countryside, who are no longer passive politically, must see reasons for hope in life under free institutions... the attraction for Castro-communism is for ordinary people who want action—as opposed to fine words—on problems they feel in their flesh and bones... Democracy must be given meaning to offset the support for Premier Castro which grows out of the belief of many Latins that the Cuban peasant has acquired his place in the sun."

These were, in brief, the conclusions of a troubled, sensitive, intelligent man.

It so happened that in the day's reading which included Ambassador Stevenson's report was a copy of the Manchester Guardian. It included an article on Peru by their brilliant reporter, James Morris. A couple of his paragraphs will illuminate the Stevenson analysis. Mr. Morris wrote:

Classic Example

"Peru offers an almost classic example of a revolutionary situation. She is effectively dominated, for all her political permutations, by a small oligarchy—some observers define it as the 2 per cent of her 11 million people who control all the wealth, others reduce it to the 25 supreme families of her social hierarchy. Her upper classes are Spanish, or mainly so, her proletariat is predominantly Indian."

"Her well-being is so unevenly distributed that though Lima (her capital) possesses homes of unsurpassed luxury and cultivation, away in the Andean Sierra millions of the Indians are on the verge of starvation."

"Peru," he continued, "presents all the stock symptoms of reaction: absentee landlords, enormous semi-feudal estates, widespread illiteracy, political irresponsibility, intricate mazes of financial interest, snobbery, sophistry, indulgence, ostentation... For generations Lima was as effectively insulated against her bleak hinterland as ever was old St. Petersburg. But misery has crept up on her, the penniless Indians and half-castes have swarmed in from the countryside, and today, to the impressionable foreigner, if not to the leggy girls on the society pages, it is no longer the grand old churches or the jacaranda gardens that express the meaning of Lima, but the slums at the back of your mind."

Real Progress

Peru, as Mr. Morris reports in detail, is one of the more advanced countries of South America. Its new leadership has made very real progress. There are new industries. The political leadership is perhaps the most enlightened in Peru's history. There are many projects to relieve unemployment. There is no feeling of hopelessness in Peru. On the contrary, she is making progress in democratic evolution.

But the slums are there. And so is the press of growing population. Pressure of people is not merely Peru's problem. It is, in less degree, our own. It will be, in time, Russia's. It already slows and frustrates Peking. It depresses India. It all but overwhelms the new Asian and African countries.

How much time is there?

History does not like to wait. This, in fact, is the problem of the Southern states of the United States. History will not wait for them.

So, looking at Peru, one of the better Latin states, reporter Morris could say: "Discontent and danger accumulate. Each year the examples of capitalism, the revelations of education, the prods of communism force envy, new awareness and poverty towards an issue."

Then he put down perhaps the most significant piece of news of all:

"Radio Moscow is broadcasting in Quechua, the language of the Peruvian Indians."

McCLOY REPORTS

Khrushchev Firm
But Door Is Open

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON (AP)—Disarmament chief John J. McCloy Monday night gave President John F. Kennedy Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's latest views on Berlin. Reportedly those are firm but leave the way open for further negotiations on the whole German question.

McCloy was with the President for more than an hour, reporting on last week's extended conversations with the Kremlin leader. Some of these discussions came after Kennedy had made clear this nation's determination to resist Khrushchev's move to force the Western Allies from Berlin.

Informed sources said McCloy reported the Soviet Premier had made clear his intention to sign a peace treaty with Communist East Germany and thus give the German Communist puppet state control over access to Berlin, which lies 110 miles inside East Germany.

But these sources said, too, that Khrushchev did not slam the door on further talks about a long-range settlement of the German question.

While most of the discussions between McCloy and Khrushchev—and most of McCloy's report—reportedly dealt with Berlin, it was understood McCloy reported also some slight favorable alteration of the Soviet position on disarmament.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk participated in the session at the White House, and he and McCloy both left by a side door, avoiding newsmen.

VACATION RETREAT
McCloy, a former U.S. high commissioner to Germany, saw Khrushchev at the premier's Black Sea vacation retreat after two weeks of discussion in Moscow looking toward a new multination disarmament conference. He was the first top-ranking U.S. official to see and talk with Khrushchev after Kennedy's speech announcing a U.S. arms buildup.

While the Kremlin boss disputed the views Kennedy set forth in his radio TV speech to the nation, these sources said the Khrushchev-McCloy conversations were

Atty. Gen. Kennedy Expects Peaceful Integration Here

Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy declared Monday that he expects no "difficulties" in Atlanta's school desegregation but vowed to back up U.S. "responsibilities" in any case.

In an interview filmed for WSB-TV, Kennedy said it would be foolish "for us not to recognize the potentially explosive problems."

Referring to a recent conference between Department of Justice and Atlanta officials, the attorney general explained:

"I'd much rather have a conversation and a discussion at the present time... than when it's too late."

Kennedy declined to comment directly on the constitutionality of Georgia's local option and tuition grant laws. He said he would have to examine the "particulars."

But in an earlier question from WSB-TV news director Ray Moore, Kennedy indicated that he believed similar laws in Virginia to be illegally used.

"This is a matter of great concern to us that the public schools are closed, in our opinion, in order to circumvent a court order," Kennedy said.

Georgia's local option law would allow local referendums to decide whether local school systems should remain open or be closed. The tuition grant law provides funds for any child of school age to use in a private nonsectarian school.

In other matters, Kennedy said that the Department of Justice had no advance knowledge of the first "freedom ride" and did not "encourage" the demonstrations but attempted to obtain a "cooling off" period.

But he asserted that the department was determined to protect the right of interstate bus passengers.

Kennedy said he attempted to extract promises from Alabama officials that they would maintain law and order and dispatched federal marshals to Montgomery only after riots broke out.

Marshals were not sent to Chicago in the wake of recent racial troubles there, Kennedy said in answer to another question, because "in Chicago, the police are

Special Session

Expected Thursday

and THOMAS F. BRADY

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—African-Asian members of the United Nations announced Monday they were calling for an emergency special session of the General Assembly to meet Thursday on the dispute between France and Tunisia over the French naval base at Bizerte and Tunisian claims to a strip of the Sahara.

They reported Monday night that they already had collected 21 of the required 50 signatures.

The decision was taken Monday at a closed meeting of the group. Their acting chairman, Kenneth K. S. Dadzie of Ghana, said they hoped to present the petition with the required signatures by Wednesday.

NO ALTERNATIVE
He said Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld then "would have no alternative but to summon the session within 24 hours."

Dadzie's statement produced conflicting views among delegates on whether an emergency session could be called in these circumstances. An ordinary special session would require at least 10 days delay for notification. An emergency session must meet within 24 hours after it is requested.

The Tunisians and some of their supporters want to strike while the iron is hot. They feel that any delay will allow feelings to cool off and they may be in a weaker position.

Other delegations believe that a cooling-off period would be the best way to reach a reasonable settlement of the crisis.

STARTED SATURDAY
The move for a special assembly before the regular session of the General Assembly opened Sept. 19 was begun on Saturday by Nathan Barnes of Liberia when the Security Council proved unable to agree on any move toward settling the Tunisian situation.

The United States and Great Britain have been trying behind the scenes to bring Paris and Tunis together for talks. U.S. sources Monday still expressed the hope that this might succeed.

Tunisian sources say the Space Push Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Monday night voted President John F. Kennedy every extra penny he asked to accelerate the space program and send a three-man team on a round trip to the moon by 1970.

The bill was passed by voice vote.

The action came as the Senate passed after two days of prolonged debate a $9,098,769,500 appropriations bill to finance the operations of 23 independent federal agencies for the fiscal year that began July 1.

GOES TO CONFEREES

It now goes to a conference committee to work out differences with an $8,490,000,000 bill passed earlier by the House.

Before final passage, the Senate rejected a series of economy moves aimed at slashing more than $8 million from the bill.

It also defeated the controversial civil rights amendment offered by Sen. Jacob K. Javits to cut off the federal airport aid to five Southern cities that practice segregation—Birmingham, Tallahassee, Montgomery, Meridian and Natchez.

ALL HE ASKED

The bill included an additional $549 million in space outlays recommended by the President in a special message to Congress May 25. The funds are for more satellite launchings and for the project to send a man to the moon and back by 1970.

The extra space funds raised the overall budget for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to a record $1.7 billion for 1961-62.

DULLES SUCCESSOR?
Fowler HamiltonRetirement
Of Dulles Confirmed

By GARDNER BRIDGE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House affirmed matter-of-factly Monday that Allen W. Dulles is retiring in a few months as director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Word that the country's top espionage agent is stepping out came as a quiet anticlimax to a welter of reports that he was due to get the ax after the Cuban invasion fiasco of last April.

PLAN TO RETIRE

White House press secretary Pierre Salinger said in effect that it has been Dulles' plan all along to retire by the end of this year and there has been no change in that plan.

Salinger's statement was made in response to a request for comment on a report that Fowler Hamilton, 50, a Wall Street lawyer with a long background of government service, is in line to succeed Dulles.

DECLINED COMMENT

Salinger declined to comment on that report, published in the Aug. 7 issue of Newsweek magazine. The magazine says Hamilton will work with Dulles for a WASHINGTON—Under the leadership of Georgia's veteran Rep. Carl Vinson, the House voted 403 to 2 Monday to give President John F. Kennedy authority to call up 250,000 ready reserves in the Berlin crisis.

Since the Senate, under the leadership of Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., had passed an identical resolution, 75 to 0, last Friday, the House approval Monday completed action on the measure and sped it to the White House.

This came just six days after Kennedy went before the nation to call for a build-up of military strength to meet Soviet threats against West Berlin.

FUND WAITS ACTION

Still pending in the House for rules committee approval Tuesday and a floor vote Wednesday is another bill, already passed by the Senate, to authorize the Defense department to buy an extra $558 million worth of weapons, planes and ships in fiscal 1962.

In asking the House for swift approval of the military manpower call-up resolution, Vinson said:

"It is an indispensable part of the President's answer to the present unsettled state of world affairs."

"It is America's answer to Khrushchev's threats."

"It is our assurance to the world that we stand firm—determined—united—and ready to make whatever sacrifice is required to preserve our rights—our obligations—and our freedom."

PLEA FOR ACTION

The House chamber rang with the eloquence of Vinson's voice as the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee dramatically sounded a call to action.

"This resolution is merely a part, but a very significant part, of our decision to enforce our rights in Berlin, and to impress

15 Are Indicted by U.S. Jury
In Telfair Vote Fraud Case

By JACK NELSON

SAVANNAH—A federal grand jury here returned a sealed indictment Monday charging conspiracy in the Telfair County vote fraud investigation.

The Constitution learned from an authoritative source late Monday night that about 15 persons are named in the indictment.

Assistant Dist. Atty. William T. Morton of Augusta, who presented the case to the grand jury, told a reporter earlier that names of the defendants would not be released until they have been arrested.

He declined to say how many indictments were returned. "I'm just a hired hand," Morton said, "Washington said no news on this."

Dist. Atty. Donald Fraser also said it was "against our policy" to announce the number of defendants until they have been arrested.

The grand jury probe climaxed a lengthy investigation by the FBI.

During the FBI's work in Telfair County, two Telfair political leaders—Jack Walker, local Democratic executive committee chairman, and Preston Rawlins, county attorney—went to Washington to ask Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy to leave the matter in local hands.

When asked about the Washington visit by Walker and Rawlins, the Justice department announced the FBI investigation was continuing.

Walker and Rawlins and just about anybody who is anybody in Telfair politics were here Monday during the grand jury deliberations.

Walker and Rawlins were not witnesses.

Nether was County Commissioner Walter Dyal, but he also was present and told a newsmen: "Our county stands indicted and I'm just here to be with them."

A witness was L. T. (Pete) Yawn, who said he related to the jury how he had tabulated the number of voters in the Milan precinct last Nov. 8.

If Dogs Could Smile, Tippy Would---He's That Happy

PANACEA, Fla. (AP)—Tippy, the sad-faced dog, had a joyous reunion with his young masters Monday.

For five weeks, the mixed breed mutt haunted the roadside here, eyeing every passing car to see if it contained his owners.

Monday, an auto stopped and from it burst forth Ricky Sarvis, 4, and Noah Sarvis, 5. The three held a rambunctious reunion.

W. S. Schley, restaurant owner who fed the dog while he was waiting to be reclaimed, reported there was no doubt about his being their dog. "He jumped all over the boys, licked their faces, ran around barking like crazy," he said.

The boys, who said the dog's name was Tippy, live only five miles away. They persuaded their grandmother, Eona Vickers, to drive them to Schley's restaurant to see the dog after hearing about the pooch's long wait.

News stories of the dog's vigil were printed widely. Two owners of lost dogs drove to Panacea from Palatine, Ill., and Fort Myers, Fla., to see if it was their pet.

Mrs. Vickers speculated that Tippy leaped on a passing truck and rode so far he became lost.

E. Germans Blame West For Polio

BERLIN (AP)—Communist East Germany moved early Tuesday to restrict travel between its territory and West Germany with a charge that West German tourists are spreading polio beyond the Iron Curtain.

Western observers said the Reds may have brought up the charge in an effort to block the steady flow of East German refugees to the West.

ASKS 'PROTECTION'

The official East German news agency ADN said the Communist puppet regime's Health Ministry had asked the Interior Ministry to "take steps in regard to travel between West Germany and the German Democratic (Communist) Republic that will produce the best protection for its citizenry."

The extent of travel restrictions and when they would take effect were not disclosed.

The move came after a new Communist regulation had gone into effect Monday night giving the East Germans control over Western air traffic to Berlin — if it is enforced. Western officials don't believe it will be.

LANDINGS ALLOWED

Three Western planes landed at West Berlin's Tempelhof Airport Monday night without any interference from the East German Reds.

The ADN report said proof that polio is being brought into East Germany from the West is supported by the number of West German tourists undergoing treatment for polio in East German hospitals. The agency did not say how many were being treated.

"The dangers arising out of this situation are to be fought in the interests of each citizen's health," ADN said.

SAY VACCINE REFUSED

The agency blamed what it called a rapid spread of polio in West Germany on the Bonn government's refusal to accept three million units of doses of live vaccine which the Red regime offered. It said West German authorities said they are not sure of the vaccine's effectiveness.

The question of live versus dead has become a hot political issue between East and West Germany. The Communists say all East German children have received fruit-flavored doses of the live vaccine, which is made in the Soviet Union.

The Reds accused West Germany of refusing the vaccine to save face.

Up to July 15 there were 1,254 polio cases—76 of them fatal—in West Germany. Last year there were only 506 cases in the same period.

The Health Ministry in Bonn said, however, there is no sign of a major epidemic in West Germany.

Macmillan Stirs Uproar With Free Market Plan

By THOMAS P. RONAN

LONDON — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan told a tense and at times rowdy House of Commons Monday that his government intended to seek negotiations for membership in the Common Market.

He stressed that Britain would not join unless it obtained satisfactory arrangements "to meet the special needs of the United Kingdom, of the Commonwealth and of the European Free Trade Association."

His statement brought cries of "shame" from some members of the Labor Party. And some in his own Conservative Party were equally unhappy.

In an extraordinary scene, without parallel in Commons in recent years, Anthony Fell, a right-wing Conservative, rose to denounce the "quite shocking" statement as full of political doubletalk.

As Conservative members shouted "Sit down" and "Leave the party," Fell said he now believed the prime minister was a national disaster.

Macmillan stood and repeatedly motioned for Fell to sit down but the outraged Conservative said the prime minister could not tell him to sit down.

MOST DISASTROUS

His voice rising even higher, Fell shouted that the prime minister's decision "to gamble with British sovereignty" and with 650,000,000 people of the British Commonwealth who depended on his faith and leadership was the most disastrous thing any prime minister had done for many generations.

"I suggest the best service the prime minister could do would be to resign," Fell said.

That brought a gleeful cheer from the Labor members. But Macmillan cut the exchange short with the curt observation that he had no doubt Fell would repeat his view during the debate on his statement.

Despite the outburst by Fell, the government was understood to be pleased with the reception given the announcement. Certainly the prime minister was given substantial applause by the Conservatives.

MADE IT CLEAR

During questioning he made it clear beyond doubt he believed Britain's membership in the Common Market was of utmost importance. Solemnly he warned again and again of the consequences of failure in the negotiations.

His warnings were directed as much to the six members of the Common Market as to the politicians crowding the Commons chamber and to the British people.

He said Britain and the Common Market nations should clearly understand that if the negotiations failed "quite a lot of things will happen and major changes may have to be made in the foreign policy and commitments of Great Britain."

MIGHT RECONSIDER

This seemed to suggest that Britain might have to reconsider her North Atlantic Treaty Organization and other commitments if barred from the Common Market.

Macmillan said he was hopeful but not confident about the outcome of negotiations and that they could "fall to the ground within a few weeks" if the Common Market refused concessions.

"There will be very grave effects upon the life of Europe if that happens," he added.

The debate will be held Wednesday and Thursday and Britain's move toward the Common Market will depend on the outcome of the vote Thursday night.

ENOUGH SUPPORT

An informed estimate is that about 15 Conservatives will vote against the government or abstain. But it is assured enough support for approval of the prime minister's move.

The Labor Party, also badly split on the Common Market issue, has not yet decided its tactics. It prefers to let the government take the responsibility for the decision on Common Market membership.

Given a favorable vote, the government will apply for membership in the common market

8 of 10 Cuban PW's Return to Havana

HAVANA (UPI)—Eight of the captured Cuban invaders who went to Miami to try to save Premier Fidel Castro's tractors-for-prisoners deal returned Monday, leaving behind two "deserters" who refused to return.

Ulises Carbo, head of the prisoner group, said on his return just before noon that he was "very optimistic" about the progress of the tractor-purchase campaign in the United States.

The prisoners were held incommunicado in a room at the airport while they waited for the five-car motorcade that carried them at high speed away from the airport.

Many members of the crowd on hand at the airport when the plane landed, apparently relatives of the prisoners, called them by name but were unable to get close enough to talk with them.

The prisoners were accompanied from Miami by five members of a "Family Committee" which hopes to formalize the tractors-for-prisoners deal.

The four male members of the Family Committee said they will volunteer to take the places in prison of two "deserters" from the prisoner delegation who announced they will remain in the United States in defiance of an "honor vow" to return to Cuba.

The fifth member of the Family Committee is Mrs. Virginia Betancourt, the pregnant wife of one of the captured Pigs Bay invaders.

FLED TO TAMPA
Mirto Collazo, one of the "deserters," had fled to Tampa Monday. The other, Reinaldo Pico, was incommunicado and under an assumed name in a Miami hotel. Pico's "disappearance" Sunday touched off a kidnapping scare but he said he merely left with two reporters of an exiled newspaper to be interviewed. Police had feared reprisals at the hands of friends of the returning prisoners.

Ulises Carbo, one of those who returned, said at the airport that he was "sorry for Pico and Collazo." He added "their attitude deserves only our heartiest condemnation."

Atlas Hits 5,000-Mile Bullseye

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—An advanced Atlas missile

smacked a target 5,000 miles away Tuesday unleashing brilliant yellow and violet flares as it dived on its target in a test aimed at devising safety requirements for space-borne atomic power units.

The sodium and potassium flares erupted as re-entry heat of several thousand degrees Fahrenheit burned through the simulated atomic fuel cores which carried them. No nuclear material was aboard.

Men and cameras on ships, planes and on down-range Ascension Island watched and recorded the flashes and the ionization trails created by the disintegrating capsules. Radio instruments relayed temperature information.

The success was the second straight for the improved Atlas E missile, being developed for greater range and heavier payload than the present operational D model. Last time out, an E rocket flew a record of 9,050 miles.

Kennedy, Chiang Aide Vow Unity

Copyright, 1961, by The New York Times Co.

WASHINGTON — The United States and Nationalist China exchanged public assurances of mutual support Monday, as Vice President Chen Cheng began his official visit to Washington.

Privately, there was a substantial difference of opinion on tactics to be followed in the United Nations to prevent the seating of Communist China.

Chen, who is also the premier of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist China, conferred for about an hour and 40 minutes with President John F. Kennedy. Later, he was guest of honor at a White House luncheon.

He was accompanied on both occasions by Shen Chang-Huan, the foreign minister of Nationalist China.

The question of how best to keep Communist China out of the United Nations was not the main topic of Monday's discussions. The subject is expected to be discussed in considerable detail when Chen and Shen see Kennedy again at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Kennedy and Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, in separate public statements, sought to leave no doubt that the United States still stands with Nationalist China in opposition to U.N. membership for the Chinese Communists.

Kennedy, offering a toast and some praise for Chen at the White House luncheon, said that the U.S. and Nationalist China were "intimately associated."

Chen's visit, he said, "can do much to make sure that both his country and ours move on parallel lines in the difficult days and years ahead."

Chen responded that his conversations with Kennedy "left me with a very deep impression that this will be a great contribution to our national policy so determined to fight against international communism."

He said his visit here was "the high point in my personal life."

On Wednesday morning, Chen and several members of his party will fly by helicopter to Gettysburg, Pa., to have breakfast with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Eisenhower, who similarly entertained Pakistan President Mohammed Ayub Khan on his recent visit to Washington, extended the invitation Monday from his vacation retreat in the North Woods.

Russian officials canceled a lecture at the Education Ministry and a lunch offered by Cruzeiro Magazine, saying Gagarin "just wants to rest and may be ride around."

Later in the day, the Russian rode through downtown Rio in a closed Cadillac escorted by motorcycle police.

Gagarin had complained earlier that he was "exhausted" by the demands of news photographers, who he said were "worse than the space ship."

The Soviet spaceman had been besieged by news photographers ever since he arrived in Brazil. In Brazilia, police beat off photographers with their clubs, drawing protests from professional groups.

Gagarin paid an official call on Lacerda early Monday. Both men were all smiles at their meeting, but the atmosphere chilled quickly when the governor introduced such issues as Berlin into the conversation.

"Do you think your space flight contributed to world peace?" Lacerda asked Gagarin after a preliminary exchange of pleasantries.

"Yes, indeed," Gagarin replied. "That is why I am visiting your country."

"Then can you reassure the peoples of the world on this point: including the people of Berlin?" the governor asked.

Gagarin's smile vanished. He nodded, but did not speak.

"I hope your flight contributes to world peace," Lacerda said. "Out there in space there is freedom of thought and freedom of the press. These freedoms are sometimes suppressed down here on earth."

Gagarin did not reply except to thank the governor for receiving him and to say goodbye.

Reds to Put Second Man Into Orbit

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union is readying another manned space shot, reliable sources said Monday.

The exact date of the firing is uncertain because of technical circumstances but it is likely to come within a few weeks.

Yuri Gagarin, who currently is touring as a global goodwill ambassador, will not pilot the flight. The Soviets will choose from several dozen men being trained for space flight.

The new attempt will be to orbit the earth more than once and will be guided by the spaceman himself. Gagarin during his trip in the spaceship "Vostok" circled the earth only once and his ship was directed from the ground.

Expert Scoffs at Lincoln Death Story

By RAYMOND J. CROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP)—A researcher into Civil War undercover activities scoffed at a report of evidence linking the Union secretary of war, Edward M. Stanton, with the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

"There's obviously nothing to it," said Jacob Mogelev, author of a recently published book called "Death to Traitors." This is a biography of Lafayette C. Baker, Lincoln's chief secret policeman, who led a flamboyant war against spies, defeatists and subversives in the North.

A story from Gettysburg, Pa., Sunday reported the discovery in an old military book of a coded message, apparently in Baker's handwriting. It spoke of Stanton as a "Judas" and seemed to implicate both him and Baker himself in a plot to get rid of Lincoln and take over the country.

The book containing the message was found by Ray A. Neff, a Gibbsboro, N.J., research chemist, in a second-hand book store in Philadelphia. He investigated the document in detail for a year in conjunction with "Civil War Times," published 10 times a year in Gettysburg.

Mogelev said that, in the first place, his research into the life of Baker never turned up a single instance where he used a code. In the second place, Mogelev added, all the evidence is that Baker was completely loyal to Lincoln.

"I would say there is not shred of truth to this evidence," Mogelev said.

Similar accusations have been directed before at Stanton but have been generally discounted by historians in the absence of solid evidence.

Mogelev's book, "Death to Traitors," takes its title from a badge Baker wore. A vigilante from California, Baker rode a spirited horse and entered with ruthless zest into the war against subversion.

Mogelev also takes issue with any idea that Baker was poisoned after the war by people who thought he knew too much.

"All the evidence indicates," Mogelev said, "that he died of natural causes, worn out by his work and disappointed at what he thought was the government's failure to give him his just reward."

By coincidence, just 100 years ago Monday, Baker was a temporary prisoner of Jefferson Davis, Mogelev says. During the first battle of Bull Run, Baker was working behind the Confederate lines, gathering information.

He was caught and quizzed severely by Davis, but talked his way to freedom.

The purported Baker message said Lincoln's death had been plotted by those officially close to him and went on: "As the fallen man lay dying, Judas came and paid respects to one he hated, and when at last he saw him die, he said, 'Now the ages have him and now the nation have I.'" who are you?

That is a paraphrase of the remark generally attributed to Stanton at Lincoln's death: "Now he belongs to the ages."

You're the hale and hearty, alive and lovable girl whose mother remembers, as if it were only yesterday, when she sent you bouncing off to kindergarten in a pink pinafore, and who today (at this hour, at least) considers pale pink strictly for the lips, and a wardrobe absolutely snobby which doesn't include Magenta, plum pretty and a decidedly sophisticated Fall Color. You're nosey, choosy. You move like quicksilver; your head is full of new ideas. You're a capsule of pep. You love to gather where the clan meets, and that's usually at your house where you and your girl friends raid the refrigerator, sit down to giggle, gossip and to wait; wait, of course, for the boys. You spend hours on the telephone (how else can you keep in touch every hour on the hour?), your own private phone, which came as an emergency measure when your dad and big brother joined forces and moved in a covey of carrier pigeons as means of communication with the outside world.

If you dress well you're "neat," and we at Davison's know you're as clothes-conscious as any one of the best-dressed women in America. You're critical, but open-minded, go along with fads, but are wisely more interested in long-range fashion. You're the world's greatest little shopper, do a good share of looking with your girl friend before you buy. And then, you cheerfully pack your purchase home to mother, who, if sometimes reluctantly, approves (why shouldn't she, everything's so dreamy)! Dad probably foots the major portion of the bill, but you subsidize your allowance as a willing wage-earner in the soundest business in the world, baby sitting. You're unique, you're sweet, you're a Preteen, and Davison's loves you "the most."

what is DYD?
We love you because you're always hep on what's new from hairdo to toenail polish; from skirt length to the heel height of Sunday-best shoes. We love you because you keep us on our toes, and we strew your path with rose petals whenever you enter our big doors. You're your own department, the Preteen Shop on Davison's Street Floor; your own club, DYD (Davison's Young Deb) Club; and if you don't belong, join now. This live-wire organization meets every month, the first fall meeting is Monday, September 11th. We've interesting experts by the dozens to answer every beauty question, and report the news on make-up, diet, posture, fashion, hair styling and more. They'll join you informally (there's nothing stuffy about DYD) at every get-together, and it's fun! Interested? Good, then pick up your private phone and dial JA. 2-7612, Ext. 8086, ask for personable Paula Roberts, Davison's DYD sponsor, and she'll add your name to Davison's proud DYD roster. It doesn't cost a penny. If you're a Preteen, you're in; in DYD, and, as always, first in the hearts of Davison's.
P.S.—Make a mental note: Davison's Back-to-School Preteen Fashion Show, Saturday, August 12th, 11:30 a.m. Pre-teen Department, Street Floor. See your girl friends, members of Davison's new 1961 Preteen Fashion Board model.

Rep. Vinson Offers Some Good Advice

With an almost unanimous vote, the House yesterday approved the joint resolution already approved by the Senate authorizing an increase in the armed forces to 2,743,000 men. It sets the stage for a gradual or rapid buildup, depending upon whatever the circumstances may be.

In any event, the immediate buildup will affect thousands of reservists while the regular forces are brought up to authorized strength. During this transition, the country again can be grateful to its citizen-soldiers.

Georgia's Rep. Carl Vinson, who introduced the resolution, made some significant remarks the country should not forget.

"I can only express the fervent hope," he declared, "that if the Berlin crisis should ease, no one in the House or in this administration will advocate a reduction in force. . . . If this is the strength figure necessary to maintain peace, then this is the strength we must maintain until the peace of the world is assured beyond doubt."

Rep. Vinson is correct in pointing out that American armed strength has fluctuated too much during the cold war period. With each crisis we have reacted with a buildup, leaving the initiative always to the Communists. Successive flareups in Laos, Berlin and elsewhere certainly prove we must have the capacity for fighting both a nuclear and non-nuclear war.

These fluctuations as economy measures have not proved to be such. They have, in fact, had the opposite result and have invited the Communists to create crises and threats of war.

Everyone regrets that this burden upon the nation's resources must be continued for as long as anyone can foresee. Arming for peace, however, is our best insurance against nuclear war.

We Can Go No Further Without Rapid Transit

Each time there is a wreck on the expressway Atlantans are reminded all over again of the growing inadequacy of the system. Two or three lanes of highway are no longer capable of moving rush-hour traffic into or out of the downtown area.

Wrecks, stalled cars and trucks and other such delays often paralyze the expressway for a half-hour or even more. The answer is not more expressway lanes. Almost all our public officials and all of our planners agree on this. The answer is mass transportation. The problem of moving people from far-flung areas into central Atlanta is one that requires rapid mass transportation.

We have gone about as far as we can go without it. The cycle of growth to congestion to decline will begin here unless steps are taken to end that congestion.

Why Bar the Doors To Citizens of Wayne?

Wayne County citizens are entitled to know exactly what goes on at today's meeting of their county commissioners.

Two members claim the chairmanship. County employees have had payless paydays two weeks in a row. Business firms have questioned whether or not county checks would be valid if they were written. A citizens' committee claims to have

Close-up

Berlin or No Berlin, Conflict Will Stay

The speed with which Congress has acted upon President Kennedy's request to beef up U.S. military forces for the showdown on Berlin reflects the national will.

There can be no doubt that the American people are solidly backing the moves to meet this crisis which Khrushchev has precipitated to test our nerve and willingness to protect our interests.

The costly military buildup is aimed primarily at a strengthening of conventional fighting power to permit greater freedom of military action without resorting to nuclear war. It also is designed to increase our military strength as a backup for diplomacy. It thus offers a means of keeping the peace and launching a worldwide peace offensive.

It should be apparent to everyone now that the struggle with aggressive communism is not something that will reach a dramatic climax and then subside. It is something with which we must live, perhaps for generations. It is not just enough to react noisily to a military threat; we must meet the other aspects of the cold war—political, ideological and economic.

Over the weekend the Soviet Communist Party issued its new draft program. It reaffirms much of Lenin's basic doctrine but withdraws from the premise that war is inevitable. Instead, current Communist leadership thinks victory for more than 1,000 signatures on a petition seeking a detailed audit of county books.

When the public is barred from meetings of governmental bodies, as was the case in the squabble that produced two claimants to the chairmanship of the Wayne commission, taxpayers naturally wonder if the affairs of the county are being conducted properly. The tangled situation there emphasizes the point. Despite the muddle, though, the leader of the majority faction on the board has stated today's meeting will be another closed session.

What the commission does is the business of the public. Today's meeting should be open to one and all. Differences should be resolved and the county operated on an up-and-above-board basis.

Otherwise, a lot of people are going to keep on wondering why there should be any need for secrecy. Is there, indeed, something to hide in the way the county is run?

Decision a Turning Point For England and Europe

England moves toward membership in the European Economic Community (common market) slowly and surely. Recent economic crisis brought about by an adverse balance of payments makes the move less slow and more sure.

This is a significant turning point for England, the Commonwealth and the present six members on the Common Market. It also is significant for Britain's partners in the European Free Trade Association. As some have already indicated, they will follow Britain into the more powerful organization.

As much as England's resolve represents a turning point for the nations directly involved, its real significance is for Europe as a whole—and the world. What we are seeing in Europe is the slow and painful birth of a powerful new state, the state of Europe.

Eventually Western Europe will be an integrated political and economic entity (how integrated is a question yet to be answered); answering it when viewpoints are as divergent as the Netherlands' and France's, for example, will take a long time. It will be, both from a standpoint of population and industrial productivity, on a par with the two leading powers of today, the United States and the Soviet Union.

That is a long way off. The immediate years ahead will see England joining in an economic partnership that goes against the grain of all English history—but one that will be of infinite value to the English and to their neighbors.

Dr. Roberts' Legacy Is An Enriched Profession

Death of Dr. M. Hines Roberts, of Atlanta, was one of the more melancholy pieces of news of the past weekend. He leaves as a legacy a brilliant career in which his compassion and skill combined to give him a reputation as a pediatrician which was not merely nationwide but which extended, too, into medical centers of Canada and South America.

Dr. Roberts devoted much of his time to research into children's diseases. The well-being of the children of today and the future is better because of him. He was a gentle, patient man, who, despite the demand of his profession, found time for books, friends and for active participation as an informed citizen. His profession and our state are the less for his passing.

world communism can be achieved without thermonuclear war. Not for one moment should the West accept this as a sedative because they have resorted to war and continue to do so in their drive to encircle the West.

None should overlook in the Soviets' so-called new program there is no retreat in the ideological and economic war. Significant is the reaction of Sen. J. William Fulbright, who warns that we cannot neglect development of our own economy and that of the underdeveloped nations.

"The tendency in Congress," says Sen. Fulbright, "is to respond to every Soviet threat by increasing our own military strength. This won't be enough. We must also develop our own economy."

In its declaration that the Soviet Union would surpass the United States in production by 1980, the new program contains an admission of present shortcomings. After four decades of sacrifice, the Soviet people still lack the consumer items that are standard in most Western countries. They still must live on promises and hope. After four decades of sacrifice, there are still food shortages and scarcities of basic necessities.

This declaration of purpose, however, underlines what President Kennedy made clear. The arms race arises not solely from the Berlin dispute, as dangerous as that is, but from a worldwide conflict. Until the Communists give up their goal of world domination, it will continue.

Dr. Caldwell

Gives a Warning

The veteran educator Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell has felt the political fires of his time. This suave and learned Harvard man who has proposed his own retirement soon as chancellor of the University System of Georgia deserves, therefore, to be heard as an expert.

And last Sunday night he frankly told the Georgia Foundation for Independent Colleges an important reason for private colleges to exist: To assure scholastic freedom and independence.

"Higher education is not and should never be a monopoly of the state," said Dr. Caldwell, speaking as one who devoted his career to state education.

The nation's present half-and-half proportion between private and public higher education prevents concentration of power over learning, he said.

"If one university is forced by social or governmental pressure to circumscribe the freedom of its faculty," Dr. Caldwell said, "then there are other universities and colleges in which faculty members may continue to exercise the inalienable rights of scholars and searchers after truth."

Moreover, he said, a private college can be as good as it wants to be, "not subject to the influences of state and federal controls that are sometimes stereotyping in their effects."

Dr. Caldwell was not knocking his own system of public colleges, which is educating two thirds of Georgia's 51,000 college students this year. But he was urging a continued balance between state and private education on the college level in the next difficult decade, a time when enrollments will climb 50 per cent to 75,000 in Georgia, requiring heavy money contributions from private sources if the colleges are to cope.

But what he did not say specifically about the political dangers afflicting public college education can be readily recollected by any citizen of Georgia.

The late Gov. Eugene Talmadge got the University System discredited because he purged professors he didn't like. Numberless teachers in the state have felt the heat from segregationist officialdom when they tried to teach the great Southern social issues objectively. Some groups in Georgia already want to copy Florida's foolish effort to enforce a law telling teachers what they can, and cannot, teach about communism. One member of the University System's Board of Regents itself obstructed efforts to deal with student riots during desegregation.

It ought to be noted that in Georgia, where state politicians make careers of denouncing federal interference, the hurtful interference in education has come from the state politicians themselves who, like so many sinners, engage in the practice they deplore.

If education, public or private, ever is whipped into searching for political safety instead of ruthless truth, liberty will die here, and that is why Georgia's classrooms must be shielded against any one group's political notions.

Discipline Is Still Up to the Parent

WASHINGTON—In the matter of juvenile delinquency and widespread juvenile shiftlessness, there are increasing signs of a healthy revolt against that old American custom of expecting George to do it—the government.

Many days of solemn congressional hearings here into such things as violence on television and into ways and means to make the youngsters pull up their socks in general have produced about what might have been expected. There have been endless speeches in the Congressional Record, and there has been much viewing with alarm.

At last, however, and partly due to certain unusually brave government officials like Secretary Ribicoff of Health, Education and Welfare, the plain facts are insisting upon raising their plain heads above all this hullabaloo. The plain facts are these:

There is not now, and there never will be so long as we retain constitutional free speech and the right to private management of private property, any lawful and effective means of preventing television from showing what the public either wants or is too lazy or too stupid to reject by turning off the dial.

And there is not now, and never will be, any lawful and effective way to saddle the public authorities entirely with the responsibility which belongs to parents, always has and always will.

This is the simple responsibility

Whatever Else SAFE Is, It's Certainly Not Safe

It is fitting that the first meeting of the new Southern governor's group should have been held at Jackson, Mississippi, where more than 250 of the Freedom Riders have so far been jailed. It is fitting that the next meeting should be scheduled for Montgomery, which this year achieved international notoriety through mob violence. No doubt meeting No. 3 can be held at Little Rock, a place name even better known around the world.

Governors Barnett of Mississippi, Patterson of Alabama, Hollings of South Carolina and (yes, verily) Faubus of Arkansas might do well to ponder a new name for their new outfit, however.

They are calling it SAFE. Whatever else it is, it is not that. The Barnett-Faubus-Patterson approach to Southern problems is a very chancy business.

The experience of the past four years has shown repeatedly that it doesn't work. The same roll of misadventures shows that it is fantastically costly in foreclosed opportunities.

Two of the four goals of SAFE, as forwarded by the Associated Press, are:

Improvement of the South's position in its battle for the right of self-determination and for preservation of constitutional government.

Expansion of the South's economic position.

The two goals are not compatible.

There is nothing very surprising about the gathering at Jackson of Barnett, Faubus and Patterson. What is surprising is that they should attempt to peddle the same old line about painless defiance—

'Now I Understand Why Mr. Rockefeller Left (Jekyll) --- He Couldn't Afford It'

Hampton—The more I read, the more I see that many people have been "misinformed" about Jekyll Island. I had read that it was to be a "family vacation spot"—also one close by and one that the average family could afford. Boy, how misleading!

I called recently and made reservations for my family. Received a two-bedroom-and-kitchenette apartment reservation for $24 per day. Sent my reservation check in a week in advance. Got to the motel around 5:30 on the date of reservation, was told my check didn't get there early enough and my apartment had been rented to someone else.

There I was with a family of six, trunk full of groceries and no place to stay! The clerk said, however, he had made reservations for us at another motel—but no kitchenette. Our two bedrooms were just $32 per night!!—and have you ever tried to feed six hungry people three times a day in a restaurant? Our planned vacation was cut short to a two-night visit and for those who have to live on a budget I might conclude that it cost us $20 per person or $120 for our family for two days at Jekyll. (Now I understand why Mr. Rockefeller left—even he couldn't afford it.) I'm still mad about the spoiled groceries, and the motel clerk that you can't depend on.

We could have taken that $120 and spent a lovely week on Daytona Beach, and believe you me, next year that's what we'll do.

things I have read and heard, there seems to be serious doubt of foreign aid being of any avail. It seems to be a well known fact that a great deal of this foreign aid is being received with nothing but resentment.

Rules Committee's Limitations Cited

Alma—You can and should favor your readers before the present session of the U.S. Congress adjourns by illuminating a serious journalistic blind spot relative to the function of the House Committee on Rules.

Readers of the modern American press have been led to believe that the small Rules Committee can preclude action by the House on proposed legislation and thereby "defeat the democratic process."

Any time the majority of the membership of the House, presently 219 members, sees fit to consider legislation that is being held up in the Rules Committee, all they are required to do is affix their signatures to a simple discharge petition which will automatically discharge the Rules Committee from further consideration of the full proposed legislation and bring it to the floor where the full House can work its will.

Grandpa Was Glad for Shoes

The old-timer who remembers when he had to eat at the second table has grandchildren who brag about "seconds."

The second phone, the second bathroom, the second TV, the second car. Not much said, though, about the second mortgage. Speaking of second cars, Leon Smith, witty Thomastonian, notes

"These days with so many places for wives to drive the children in the family car, there is a good deal of emphasis on what the car dealers call 'good, cheap, second transportation.' We know a fellow who said he got a real bargain in some good cheap transportation the other day . . . a pair of $9.95 walking shoes."

I have an idea many a laddie has a second car whose granddaddy didn't have a second pair of shoes.

All of which leads to the story of the fellow who commented, "I bought my wife a second car the other day so now she drives forth and forth to town."

"You mean back and forth?" a friend said.

"No, I mean forth and forth. She hasn't learned how to back yet."

ANOTHER MOSQUITO: In Rochester, N.Y., an 86-year-old man was hit by an automobile and thereafter treated by a doctor for the first time in 60 years. The other doctoring was in the Philippines in 1904 when he had malaria.

That lends an element of truth to the story of the 92-year-old mountaineer who came out of the Georgia woods, saw his first automobile and died.

He didn't see it in time.

CATFISH CHARLIE, "from down on the banks of the Flowing Flint," thinks I should share with you all the statement of David L. Mrs. Kennedy, Aid Draw Reader's Fire

Tucker—This concerns a "reply" that appeared in The Constitution recently. The writer was defending Jacqueline Kennedy against a remark made in an earlier article. He said, "Jackie is the best thing that's happened to international diplomacy since the invention of foreign aid." That is his opinion and he is entitled to it.

I can use that same statement, and with a little explanation convey my feeling about Mrs. Kennedy. You see, from some of the

The Aid 'Bridge' Has 'Collapsed'

Some years ago a bridge collapsed over what they call the "narrows" in either the Seattle-Tacoma or Portland area of the Pacific Northwest. The incident is vague in my memory, but I do recall seeing a picture of the collapsed structure showing an automobile with its front wheels extending out over the void where the bridge had been.

I believe the explanation of the collapse at the time suggested that the wind velocity caused more movement in the bridge than engineering estimates had allowed when it was built. At the end of the story, there was an announcement that the bridge was to be redesigned and rebuilt.

This incident came to my mind when I read former Vice President Nixon's recently published newspaper article on foreign aid.

Mr. Nixon confessed to a position of solid support for the Kennedy proposal on long-range foreign aid commitments. He admitted that over the past 15 years, much of the more than 80 billion dollars we've spent on foreign aid has been wasted. He spoke of corruption, inefficiency, complete recent failure in Laos. He also said there would be voices raised against this long-term foreign aid commitment, adding: "The case opponents will make against foreign aid on the hustings is as devastating as it is demagogic."

When I read that sentence I thought, "Here we go again." Because someone disagrees with us, he is a demagogue. This is the traditional attack employed by the liberals against all conservative proposals, and how Mr. Nixon could fall into the trap and employ name calling to justify his opinion is more than I can understand.

Now let us return to the bridge for a moment. When it collapsed there was still a need for a bridge, but since this one had failed, the immediate reaction was to build a new bridge but to improve the

Grass Grows and Sales Stop; Guardsmen Train for Transports

Maj. James W. Petit Jr. had needed to cut the backyard grass that was growing waist high. Capt. Ed Henderson's real estate showing should have been on Saturday for a sure sale. First Lt. Jack Barnett wanted time to prepare on Saturday for a magazine. Lt. John Chastain, M. Sgt. Garvin Bell, Airman 2/c Bobby Linzey and at least 92 per cent of other duty-crew officers and men of Dobbins Air Force Base's 116th Air Transport Wing could have found other things to do over the weekend.

But these were warriors of the Georgia Air National Guard. And they had heard the call of their country—a call that has come three times to some of these men who are priority picked and prepared to pack-up, pull out, and fly to the fighting. That is, if fighting comes.

Brig. Gen. Bernard M. Davey, commander of the 116th, knows no more about this than civilians and servicemen alike who heard President Kennedy stand up to the Berlin war threat by increasing striking forces through recruitment and the recalling of reserve and guard units.

Dobbins' recently converted transport wing was ripe, although not ready. "I've been to Gov. Vandiver's office," Gen. Davey said Sunday, a hot, sticky day that saw almost 700 air guardsmen doing their duty—duty of making the transition stage from air defense to air transport a smooth one. "There is no word on immediate call up."

The 116th could go though. "In three to five months," believes Gen. Davey. "With intensified training, that is what I would give it. Three to five months."

Intensified interest is already at Dobbins. Ninety per cent of the air guardsmen reported for weekend duty. Usual percentage is 85. "That indicates their interest."

Transition from fighters to the tremendous four-engine C97 troop transports, called "big brutes of a carrier" by the commanding general, is tough. It takes a pilot three months of active duty to change over and check out.

"We have the pilots. We are beginning over-water training flights. This is for everyone. Pilots, navigators, crewmen."

The C97s—the two at Dobbins—flew under the Sunday Georgia sun, but Saturday Maj. Glenn Heard, commander of the 128th Air Transport Squadron, and his operations officer, Maj. John Hayes, had moved them out to Minneapolis.

Maj. Petit cut his grass after nightfall. Capt. Henderson's apartment still stands. Lt. Barnett's magazine copy concerning leisure living was written, and like the 92 per cent of the weekend warriors, they had also taken two more days of training against aggression.

Everyone was talking about active duty, but Airman Linzey probably said it best: "I feel like we have come to the time when we must stand up for our convictions. None of us, of course, would want to leave our homes and families but if this is the sacrifice we must make to preserve our freedom, this is the sacrifice we will make."

Help on Industry News Asked

Gov. Ernest Vandiver said Monday that Georgia has "been dangerously close" to losing industries because of "premature publication" of names of the industries.

At his Monday morning press conference, Vandiver said advance stories on a large defense plant considering Georgia "may well have hurt our position."

Vandiver asked news media to cooperate "to protect us from the disastrous loss of an industry through the premature disclosure of our negotiations." He added:

"Certainly, I appreciate the eagerness of every citizen to learn about new industries locating in the state, which means new jobs for the unemployed, new markets for materials and new payrolls to bolster our economy.

"I'm sympathetic to the efforts of our Georgia newsmen to supply them with details of these new industries."

"But I could not rationalize the loss of a vast new industry for Georgia—and all the benefits that come with it—just so someone could get a news scoop about a proposed plant."

"I, therefore, appeal to each of you," Vandiver told the newsmen, "in whatever communication field you represent, to help us; to cooperate with us; to work with us."

Answering questions about the statement, Vandiver said he has "never been a person to suppress news," but he's "concerned about Georgia's economy."

Vandiver said advance stories about new industries gives information to business competitors and also to states competing with Georgia for new industry.

Vandiver flew to Washington last week without advance notice to seek a large defense industry considering Savannah and seek to learn more about the missile business.

"A man hoping to get a missile plant should learn a little bit about missiles," Vandiver explained.

Because Neither Would Give An Inch, Death Was Inevitable

He had hunted deer for 51 seasons. And though he defied passing time, still he observed his 82nd birthday. Sitting at a long, food-laden table, this patriarch of forest and field recounted his exciting experiences. During half a century he said that death presented its ugly face through many media: rattlesnakes, flood waters, swamp fever, hurricanes, pests and diseases. But most of the years had been treasures of delight. "See that trophy?" he asked. Looking up at a large pair of buck's horns we saw what most hunters have heard of but seldom seen.

There they were: large, angular spears reaching out in strong defense, yet locked together. Two thin remnants of skulls protruded from the base of the antlers. What happened? Once these two proud bucks stood in defiant guard over their does and young fawn. As some of the deer quietly grazed on the lower South Carolina sweet grasses, the two old bucks found the herds mixed together. With a forced snorting, sharp thrusts of paws digging in the ground, one buck charged the other. Clashing horns rang through the deep forests. Time and again they backed off and came together with fiercer charges. Does stood off at safe distance, witnessing the duel that would decide which buck would rule the two herds.

Then it happened: one terrific clash and the horns locked! They pushed, swayed, pulled and wrestled. First up, then down, they were forced to look at each other, eye to eye, at short range. The hot breath of hate and animal fury was blown in each other's face.

Night came on and the struggle continued. The rising sun next day found two exhausted bucks still unwilling to let the other graze or pull sideways to his own herd. Neither able to eat nor drink, there was no way for the two to cooperate in order to save their lives. No longer able to struggle to their feet, complete exhaustion saw vultures and insects move in to tear their flesh. Then—death! Years later the old hunter found the antlers, a mute testimony to the undying vice of combat.

Are those time-worn antlers prophetic of the human race in the twentieth century? Is the free world locked in mortal combat with forces that would enslave? Is all the writhing, pushing, pulling, subsidizing, legislating, maneuvering only desperate struggle in which there is no way out but death? Do the words of Jesus, "Love your enemies—bless them that curse you and despitefully use you . . ." constitute a way out of this locked struggle? What do you think?

It's Un-American to Compute Cost of Homegrown Vegetables

They laughed when I set out to plant a garden but, by gosh, they're laughing around mouths full of beans and tomatoes now. It's true that I never tried my hand at a vegetable garden before and they had no way of knowing my thumbs are green. The day in early spring when we marked out a plot on a neighbor's land and I started raking and clearing away for the plover one of my children remarked indignantly, "Our mother is so enthusiastic." It was, at best, a dubious sounding compliment but it's true, oh, it's true. I'm real enthusiastic. I read the gardening writers as if they were a combination of William Shakespeare and Dorothy M. Sayre. I clutch seed catalogues to my heart as if they were poetry and the friend who hauled me a load of nice, mellow, well-aged cow manure found my gratitude so over-weening he wondered if he had dropped his wife's pearl necklace in the truck by mistake.

At our house we have adopted a term for anybody whose opinion runs counter to ours. My son, started it and the family jubilantly took it up. We simply cry, "You capitalistic, war-mongering aggressor!" This applies to the person who wants to switch the television dial, who forgot to pick up the laundry, who ate the last of the ice cream or put the car up with an empty gas tank. But when I applied it to a friend who asked me what I figured those crisp, green, utterly beautiful, snap beans cost, he was dismayed.

The truth is that I do think it's un-American to sit around with a computer trying to figure the cost of homegrown vegetables.

There are so many things to gardening besides the end product. My beans may not actually have more vitamins or more flavor than those I buy at the market. But I had the pleasure of seeing them come up, put out those funny, graceful little tendrils that always remind me of a baby's hand, and bloom. I watched dotingly as an intoxicated bumblebee made his way from bean blossom to bean blossom like a drunk staggering from bar to bar. I was wracked with anxiety when the bottom leaves turned yellow and began to sicken and filled with relief when the rains came and the incipient puniness passed. Suspense gripped me when one infinitesimal green bean appeared and I saw no sign that it would be eventually joined by others. And then I went back in a week and picked enough beans to feed the family!

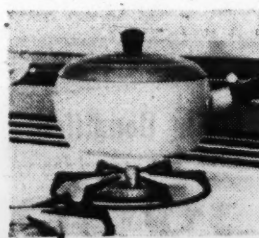

Tell me I should count the cost of those beans? Beans you grow yourself are seasoned with the salt of your own labor. The smell of the earth is gone from store-bought beans. The sound of July flies singing in the thick- et at noonday, the call of the mourning dove and the whip-poor-will at dusk flavor my beans. Next year I plan to have rows and rows of beans, enough to share with all my friends, but this year the child who leaves one inch-long snap on his plate must pack up his clothes and leave home. Like the man said, a garden is a lovesome thing. God wot!

District 1 Backers See Byrd Sweep-In

Griffin Will Be Man to Beat, Candidate Says In Savannah

Constitution State News Service

SAVANNAH—Political leaders of 17 counties of the 18-county First Congressional district predicted here Monday night an overwhelming victory for Lt. Gov. Garland T. Byrd in the 1962 governor's race.

Some 175 Byrd supporters met with the lieutenant governor at the Hotel DeSoto to map campaign strategy for the race.

A spokesman said that the only county in the district not represented at the meeting—Wheeler—will go for Byrd because all the county officials there are supporting him.

The press was excluded from the strategy meeting, but reported that Byrd told his supporters that the governor's race was going to be a contest between him and former Gov. Marvin Griffin.

Byrd said that "honesty in government" would be one of the main issues of the campaign.

He said that by the time the General Assembly meets in 1962 his political organization will be well-established in every county. He said that with such an organization his political campaign could continue without his personal direction while he presided over the Senate.

SUPPORT PLEDGED

Local political leaders who pledged support for Byrd and said their county would support him included Rep. Charlie Jones of Liberty, Sen. John C. Peterson of Montgomery, Rep. Walstein Parker of Screven, County Commission Chairman Jim L. Gillis Jr. of Treutlen, County Commission Chairman Jack Kennedy of Aitah, Sen. Ed Perry of Evans and Rep. Wimbric Walker of Telfair (Eighth District).

Rep. Jones said that Georgia needs a "good lawyer, politician and businessman" and that in Garland Byrd the state would have all three.

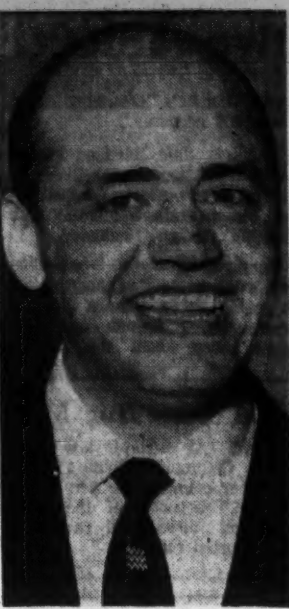

BRINSON THERE

Ralph Dawson, longtime political boss of Long County, told the rally that Long had voted for Byrd for agriculture commissioner and for lieutenant governor, had never regretted it, and would vote for him for governor.

Paul Stone of Burke County, member of the state board of education, said he would not promise Burke would support Byrd, but he said most of the "good people" of the county were working for him.

Also appearing at the rally from Burke County was J. W. Brinson, who was director of the state Parks department under the Griffin administration.

Another attending the rally from Telfair County was Jack Walker, chairman of the county Democratic executive committee.

Policeman's Case Studied In East Point

The East Point City Council was still deliberating early Tuesday morning on whether to uphold its earlier decision firing a city policeman. The policeman, Kenneth V. Byers, appealed the May 15 decision in which the council fired him.

Among the reasons cited by the council when it fired Byers was that he made unsubstantiated charges against superior officers.

ACCUSED SUPERIORS

The council also said Byers falsely accused his superior officer, Capt. A. D. Warr, of "riding" him.

During the appeal session Monday night, councilmen's tempers repeatedly flared as they demanded proof of Byers' charges of irregularity in the department, particularly against City Recorder Rodenck McDuffie and Warr.

At one point Councilman Orville Parker said: "I am here tonight to see him (Byers) put up or shut up. If he proves what he says I might fire somebody else and put him back to work."

WITNESSES WAIT CALL

While the appeal hearing was going on about a dozen policemen called as witnesses by Byers waited outside the council chambers. By midnight, none of them had testified.

City Candidates Skip Lightly Over Schools at Negro Rally

By HAROLD MARTIN JR.

Mayor and aldermanic candidates for the City of Atlanta appeared at a Negro meeting Monday night but trod lightly on the subject of open schools and integration.

Strongest speaker on the school question was Board of Education candidate Dr. Gerald Reed.

Dr. Reed said that if Atlanta's schools gave adequate education for Negroes, why then did Lockwood have to hire Ohio-trained Negroes for responsible positions.

TAKES STAND

Mayorality candidate Jim Aldridge spoke in favor of rapid transit, recreation, uniform law enforcement, a stadium and an auditorium.

Ivan Allen Jr., berated Lester Maddox for not attending the Negro meetings and M. M. (Mugsy) Smith for not attending some of the white meetings. Allen said he was going to all the meetings because he wanted to be mayor of all the people. To this Smith later replied, "How can you be mayor of only part of the people?"

As for integration, Allen said there was no white man at the meeting who backed completely the Supreme Court decisions on the subject.

"What I've had to learn is what a lot of white men have had to learn—social consciousness."

Later Smith retaliated by asking, "Where were they when the battle to keep Atlanta schools open was on? Maybe they were getting social consciousness."

Smith also charged that Allen, when he was running for governor, advocated calling a special session of the General Assembly to strengthen the segregation laws and commended then Gov. Marvin Griffin for his stand on the matter.

Allen also spoke on unemployment and job opportunities.

He asked the group if they thought any white man was going to move over to give a Negro his job and vice versa. The crowd responded, "no."

What needs to be done, said Allen, is to supply more jobs.

FIRST TIME

Earlier, a representative of A. T. Walden, a candidate for the Board of Alderman, predicted that "for the first time in the history of Atlanta we're going to have a Negro alderman."

The spokesman said "the time has come to stop talking about paternalism and give-away and to do something for the Negro."

The other mayorality candidate, Charlie Brown, told the meeting that he plans to establish a bi-racial committee that would meet weekly and study race relations problems. Brown also predicted an orderly transition in city school desegregation.

Brown also said he would build a new municipal auditorium but would not increase taxes.

Eighth Ward aldermanic candidates Goodman Cates and Joe Salem battled it out over the issue of jobs for Negroes in city government.

To Cates' report on progress in getting better positions for Negroes (as truck drivers and meter readers) Salem said, "Thank God it is an election year."

An NAACP charge of police brutality in the Atlanta Police Department, which was made recently, also came up several times.

One candidate, Comer Hawkins of the Sixth Ward, said he would advocate psychiatric examinations for all policemen to see if they had any "inherent brutality." Salem advocated a biracial committee to investigate the charges.

ANOTHER RALLY

Dr. Rufus Clement, president of Atlanta University and only Negro on the school board, spoke briefly.

He said some people had charged that he was trying to pass as white in order to get votes. Dr. Clement denied this strongly but said he didn't think race should be the determining factor in voting for anyone. He said he would stand on his record.

U.S. Ending Massive Retaliation

By LAWRENCE FELLOWS

Copyright, 1961, by The New York Times Co.

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Chester Bowles declared Monday that the United States is trying to edge away from a policy of massive retaliation.

The undersecretary of state revealed this in an hour-long address to a gathering of U.S. ambassadors and other diplomatic representatives from 21 countries in North Africa and the Middle East.

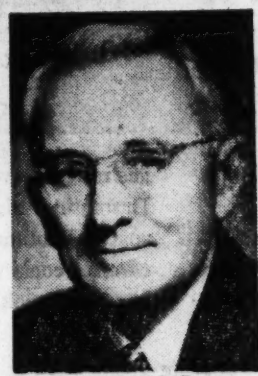

Instead of relying on a threat of massive retaliation, the policy enunciated by former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that would have brought swift, overwhelming punishment down upon any military transgressors, the United States is relying more on a buildup of her conventional strength on the ground, Bowles said.

At the same time, he said, the United States is putting more weight on a political approach to her areas of sensitivity abroad.

The feeling in the Kennedy administration, he said, is that the force of political ideas is far more powerful than the sum of the military strength and national wealth of any country.

upon the world, both friend and foe alike, that we have reached a point beyond which we will not yield," he declared.

"The onslaught of communism must be met by the determination of the free world.

"This is America's answer."

Vinson, variously known with affection and respect to his colleagues as "the admiral" and as "Uncle Carl," was applauded as he completed his dramatic speech and moved toward passage of the resolution.

There was little debate, but Republicans used the occasion to get in some digs at the Kennedy administration on Cuba and on domestic spending.

TEXAN DENIES NEED

The two protest votes against the resolution were cast by Rep. Bruce Alger (R-Texas) and Rep. Eugene Siler (R-Ky.), both of whom contended there was no need for it.

Alger later explained that he believes in "massive retaliation" and that if this country accepts the principle of limited war, we'll get one.

Rep. Les Arends (R-Ill.), the minority whip in the House, called for unanimous support of the resolution "to state emphatically to Mr. Khrushchev and our allies our will and determination . . . to fight if need be. . . .

"We love peace and we will continue to work and pray for peace," Arends declared, "but we love freedom more. . . .

BANKS ON FISSION

However, Arends emphasized that despite the limited build-up of conventional forces called for in the resolution, the United States has not changed its policy of depending basically upon nuclear force in any major conflict.

In an oblique attack on high domestic spending at a time when the nation is confronted with a military threat, Arends called on Kennedy "to make certain we have the economic strength needed" in the world emergency.

Although voting for a united front behind the President in the Berlin crisis, Republicans threw while and then take over direction of the intelligence agency in October.

Others declining to comment included Dulles, the CIA, and Hamilton himself.

Asked whether he expected to have an announcement shortly on Dulles' successor, Salinger replied that he did not.

ASKED TO CONTINUE

When President Kennedy was elected last November, he asked Dulles to continue in his $22,000-a-year supersensitive job. Government officials have said privately that Dulles coupled his agreement to do so with the expressed hope that he could retire about the end of this year.

Administration officials noted that he turned 68 last April 7.

Dulles, who looks more like a grandfatherly schoolmaster than the director of a global espionage network, is a brother of the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

APPOINTED IN 1953

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower appointed him CIA chief in 1953, after he had served two years as deputy director.

Speculation over his future boiled up after the U2 spy plane incident of May 1, 1960. It developed that the CIA had sent the U2 plane on a mission over the Soviet Union, where it was shot down, just 15 days before Eisenhower was to have a summit meeting with Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

Khrushchev broke off the meeting in a display of international indignation after it was revealed there had been a whole series of spy plane flights over his country.

CIA ACCUSED

After the Cuban invasion disaster of last spring, the CIA was accused of faulty intelligence work, and there was talk of a drastic shake-up. Spokesmen for the agency denied the charges, and Kennedy set up a special board headed by retired Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor to investigate the whole intelligence setup.

There were reports then that Dulles might be replaced by Taylor, by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, or perhaps by Gen. James M. Gavin, ambassador to France.

The CIA is so secret that its budget, running to several hundred million dollars a year, is concealed in a variety of other appropriations.

these darts at the administration:

Rep. E. A. Cederberg, R-Mich., assailed plans to establish a "youth corps" at a cost of $300,000,000, in the face of war threats and a military build-up.

HIT DEPENDENT TRIPS

Rep. Frank J. Becker, R-N.Y., said it is "ridiculous for the military to continue to send dependents of servicemen overseas, and get support from a Democrat—Rep. Porter Hardy of Virginia, who said "I don't think dependents should ever have been permitted to go into danger zones."

Rep. Frank C. Osmer Jr., R-N.J., threw the sharpest barb at the administration on its handling of the Cuban invasion fiasco.

Pointing out that President Harry S. Truman met a Berlin crisis in 1948 and that President Dwight D. Eisenhower did the same thing in 1951 and 1954, Osmer said President Kennedy has ample authority now to meet a new crisis.

'NOT IN CUBA'

But he added caustically, "the present crisis is not in Europe but in Cuba. We invited Mr. Khrushchev to take the first opportunity to call our bluff by our indecisive action in Cuba.

Osmer said of the Cuban commanoeering of an American airliner that "we should have told Castro: 'Bring that plane back to the airport in Miami in 48 hours or we are going to come and get it.'"

Although voting for the resolution, Rep. James G. Fulton (R-Pa.) called for a "go slow" policy and questioned whether the nation really faces an emergency. Rep. Gross said Americans are being "fall guys," trying to fulfill the obligations of the rest of the world.

TALKS ON PRIORITY

Vinson ignored the GOP criticism but readily answered questions concerning the priority of reserve call-ups and other features of the resolution.

Taking the floor at the beginning of the debate, the Georgian told his colleagues that "this is a very important resolution."

"These are critical days in which we live," he added. "Therefore, I request that the members refrain from audible conversation while I lay this matter before you."

Speaker Sam Rayburn gavelled for order—and Vinson began his speech to a not large audience but an attentive one.

STRESSES GRAVITY

After explaining the resolution and the President's plans to build up the armed forces, and before his dramatic peroration, Vinson made these points:

1. It would be "foolish indeed not to recognize the seriousness of the situation that exists today."

2. "Those of you who recall 1939 can see a pattern taking form. But there is a difference—we are far better prepared today for armed conflict than we were in 1939, and that . . . may be the one vital difference that will disprove the concept that what is past is prologue."

3. "The surest way to prevent war is to be prepared for it."

HAVE NUCLEAR CAPACITY

4. We must have the capacity to fight both a nuclear and a non-nuclear war.

5. "The peaks and valleys of the history of our military strength look like a profile of the Rocky Mountains—from a low of 179,000 when Vinson came to the House in 1914 to a peak of 12,124,000 in 1945, later fluctuating over Korea."

"I can only express the fervent hope that if the Berlin crisis should ease, no one in this house, or in this administration will advocate a reduction in force. If this is the strength figure necessary to maintain peace, then this is the strength force we must maintain until the 'peace of the world is assured.'"

1,008,000 MEN DUE

The resolution sent to the White House authorizes the President, without declaring a national emergency, to call up not more than 250,000 ready reserves between now and July 1, 1962, for a period of not more than one year's service.

The President plans to increase the Army by 133,000 men to a total of 1,008,000 men; the Air Force by 63,000 to 888,000 men; the Navy by 29,000 to a total of 657,000 men, and the Marine Corps up to a peak of 190,000, Vinson said.

Total strength of the armed forces will be increased from 2,493,000 to 2,743,000, he said.

UNIT CALLS

"I am advised," Vinson said, "that most of the calls of the ready reservists will be unit calls, although some individuals not assigned to units will receive orders."

"Certain Air National Guard tactical squadrons will be ordered to active duty, as well as some Air Force reserve transport squadrons, and Navy anti-submarine warfare squadrons."

"The President also has stated that future draft calls will be doubled, and then tripled."

frank and cordial in atmosphere—not a bitter exchange.

Kennedy calls the Kremlin move to sign an East German peace treaty by the end of the year an effort to kick the Western Allies out of Communist-surrounded West Berlin. He says the West will not permit this and will fight if forced to it.

On the disarmament question, U.S. sources said the Russians altered their position slightly during the fortnight of talks held in Moscow between McCloy and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin.

The slight Soviet modification was described here as not necessarily too hopeful a development but at least warranting continuation of the new U.S.-Soviet talks later.

U.S. plans were for a round of consultations first with the Western Allies, then, a U.S. informant said, the talks with the Russians may resume several weeks hence in New York where both countries have U.N. representatives.

Afro-Asians Urge U.N. Crisis Session

French have pushed the situation so far by refusal to negotiate and by "savage" armed reaction to what the Tunisians call "warning shots" in the Bizerte area, that no direct talks are possible.

In Tunis, meanwhile, Tunisia moved towards developing diplomatic support from the East and from Africa in her Bizerte crisis while awaiting a special session of the General Assembly.

Saddok Mokkadem, secretary of state for foreign affairs, conferred Monday with the Soviet ambassador and is scheduled to leave Tuesday for Moscow.

Abdel Khalik Hassouna, secretary general of the Arab League, left here Monday for Cairo after three days of talks with President Habib Bourguiba on Arab aid to Tunisia.

Before boarding his plane, Hassouna told reporters he "firmly" believed the objective of obtaining total French military evacuation of Tunisia soil could be achieved, "thanks to Arab solidarity."

At the same time Mohammed Mosmoudi, secretary of state for information, was assigned the task of touring the nations of Africa south of the Sahara to present the Tunisian point of view there.

Mosmoudi also will leave Tuesday for Dakar, Senegal, presumably his trip will include visits to the capitals of the states which were formerly members of the French community and which are still closely associated with

The United Arab Republic has promised military and economic aid to Bourguiba, and Hassouna's visit here is an indication of the new solidarity created by the Bizerte crisis between Tunisia and other Arab states.

Previously, Tunisia had been a lukewarm member of the league and there had been extreme coolness, marked by a diplomatic rupture between Tunis and Cairo.

A renewal of diplomatic ties is now expected and Mohammed Mosmoudi has proposed a meeting between Bourguiba and Gamel Abdel Nasser, U.A.R. president, to put an end to their long standing antagonism.

Radio Tunis quoted Radio Cairo Monday as having announced the departure of "some airplanes" for Tunis bearing medicine and food. The radio also said hundreds of Egyptians were volunteering to fight in Tunisia.

Meanwhile, the Algerian Nationalists here disclosed that the National Council of the Algerian Revolution was scheduled to convene following the return to Tunis Wednesday or Thursday of the Nationalists negotiating team from Geneva.

STATE LAW CITED

The aides point out that there's a state law that authorizes dissemination of fire prevention information. Other state officials, however, have questioned the law.

Earlier Monday, Gov. Ernest Vandiver was asked to comment on Cravey's statement that he planned to sue Vandiver if necessary to bring about fire safety improvements at Milledgeville State Hospital. Vandiver purred:

"I have no further statement on Mr. Cravey that would further fan the controversy or reflect on maintained through Friday, when the qualifications will end.

CODE IS CITED

Sam Massell Jr., committee secretary, emphasized that all candidates must be familiar with the recently published Primary Election Code, which spells out rules for the primary. He said candidates also must have signed an affidavit concerning any criminal record before the clerk of the superior court, and pay his entrance fee in cash, by certified check, or by cashiers check before he can qualify.

In addition to the already assured three-cornered race for nomination as mayor, contests also developed for the following posts:

For alderman — William T. Knight, longtime incumbent from the Third Ward, and Stanley P. Herndon; Dr. Forrest (Duck) Smith and former Councilman R. M. (Bob) Clark, both of whom qualified for alderman from the Eighth Ward to succeed Alderman Jesse Draper, who will not run again.

For Board of Education—Mrs. Clifford Ragsdale, daughter-in-law of former Mayor I. N. Ragsdale and incumbent Eighth Ward representative, and Mrs. Ray Mitchell.

A mayor, a president of the board of aldermen, 16 aldermen (two from each ward), nine members of the Board of Education (one from each of the eight wards and one from the city at large) are to be nominated. In addition 16 members of the City Executive Committee (two from each of the eight wards) are to be elected.

Tiny Woman Robs Bank Of $13,000

GIBSON, S.C. (AP) — A slight dark-haired, dark complexioned woman described as "rather nice looking" held up the Gibson branch of the Commercial State Bank of Laurinburg Monday and got away with about $13,300.

The woman staged the holdup at the 2 p.m. closing time on her third visit to the bank during the day.

J. G. Pate Jr., assistant cashier, described the woman as about 25 years old, about 5 feet 2 inches tall, with dark hair reaching nearly to her shoulders. After the robbery the woman fled toward Hamlet in a tan Mercury. The car was found abandoned two miles away.

The woman, he said, was very nervous during the holdup. The big, blue steel .38 caliber pistol "shook and I shook along with it," he said.

Pate said only he, Cashier L. T. Gibson and a teller, Mrs. J. M. McGregor were in the bank at the time of the robbery. They were ordered to fill two bags with money.

The woman, he said, came in the bank earlier in the day and asked for wrappers for coins. She came back later with $2 in pennies in the wrappers and got currency for them.

"Then, she made a third trip at closing time," he added.

"She asked the teller to cash a check. Mrs. McGregor said she would have to check with the cashier to get it okayed," Pate said. "The bandit reached into her black purse and instead of pulling out the check, she pulled out the .38 police special."

15 Indicted In Telfair Vote Case

In the Milan and Temperance precincts last December. The Atlanta Constitution quoted an affidavit by Yawn in which he said only 295 persons went in the polling place to vote, although the number of votes officially tabulated was 664.

Other witnesses included several persons who apparently were called to testify concerning names which The Constitution articles reported were fraudulently voted in the election.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. Jeff Bozeman, whose husband died more than four years ago. His name was on the official list of those who were supposed to have voted.

Another witness was H. O. Cravey, a DeKalb County school principal and former Telfair resident. His name and that of his wife were voted in Telfair although they said they did not vote there.

Other witnesses came from Bartow, Fla., Jacksonville, Fla., Albany and Milan.

Other officials subpoenaed included Tax Commissioner Henry Williams, Clerk of Court Louis Seay, Ordinary Ell Wilcox and Justice of the Peace Charlie Walker.

Walker, brother of Sheriff John Walker, was the JP at the Milan polling place on election day.

the scene, then jumped into the plane and ran to the pilot's compartment where he put his gun to the head of Captain Cleal.

"Take off or I'll take over," he ordered.

Cleal taxied down the runway. Britt wasn't satisfied.

"Get this plane in the air," he shouted.

Then he fired a shot into Cleal's head. It went in the right cheek and out the left eye. He shot the pilot again, in the stomach.

Co-pilot Allan Wheeler, 29, of Burlingame, Calif., jumped Britt and wrestled the gun away, but Britt came at him with a switchblade knife.

On Atlanta's impending school desegregation, the attorney general said that he had "great confidence in the State of Georgia, the people and authorities of that state and the City of Atlanta."

"This is a very difficult problem for Southern states to accept. For us not to recognize the potentially explosive problem would be like sticking our heads in the sand."

"I'd much rather have a conversation and a discussion at the present time to see what steps can be taken or what help or assistance is needed from the federal government. I'd rather have a conversation now rather than when it's too late."

"I believe the situation will be handled without any problem because I think the authorities including the attorney general (Eugene Cook) and others have really faced up to it in the State of Georgia."

1,555 DeKalb Families Given $41,543 in Food

DeKalb County issued $41,543 worth of surplus food to about 1,555 families during July.

Charles J. Lyon, surplus food director for DeKalb, said the amount is nearly $6,000 more than was issued in June.

The cost of issuing the food, Lyon said, was $2,061, or less than five per cent of the retail market value of the food itself.

The 1,555 families who received the food, he said, represent some 5,463 persons. In addition, there were 424 persons qualified to receive food who didn't pick it up.

To date, $134,050.27 worth of surplus food supplied by the U.S. Department of Agriculture has been distributed in DeKalb County.

H. D. Hatchett, state superintendent in charge of food distribution to schools and institutions, who also handles deals with the federal government in the surplus food program, commended DeKalb County for its "jam up job" in supplying the food and termed the program "ideal."

Tax Intake Off Sharply For State

Revenue Picture Dark, Says Oxford

State Revenue Commissioner Dixon Oxford warned Monday that collections for the new fiscal year will fall below the intake for the fiscal year just ended unless there's a sharp upturn in the economy.

"It could be bad," Oxford told newsmen after reporting that revenue collections for July—the first month in the new fiscal year—were off nearly $1 million.

NO WINDFALL

For one thing, he pointed out, a $15 million "windfall" in income tax collections under the state's new withholding plan won't be coming along again this year.

Then Revenue department Comptroller W. E. Strickland predicted, tax refunds will jump $3 or $4 million this year to a level of about $10 million.

"It doesn't look bright at all," said Oxford.

REFUNDS CUT NET

Strickland, who attended the press conference, said July collections were about the same as July of last year.

However, refunds totaling over $12 million cut the July net to $25.3 million.

Back in his office after a brief North Carolina vacation, Oxford again said he hasn't resigned. However, he refused to be pinned down about his future plans.

SEES BIG JOB

Oxford gave newsmen copies of a memorandum to heads of Revenue department units and said it would have to "speak for itself."

The memorandum noted there are times when all public officials "wish for the pleasantness of private life."

He added, however, that the Revenue department has a big job and he expects "all employees to faithfully perform their duties."

22 Fined, Jailed In Mississippi 'Freedom Rides'

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—City Judge James Spencer Monday convicted 22 "freedom riders" of breach of peace in desegregation attempts and released a German magazine photographer as innocent of the same charge because he became confused.

"This court does not intend to use the forces of law to prevent anyone in good faith from writing a story," Judge Spencer said.

He released Hilmar Ehrenfried Pabel, 50, of Munich, Germany, photographer for Quick Magazine in Germany.

The 22 riders were sentenced to $200 fines and four months in jail, the maximum penalty for breach of peace by disobeying a policeman. Police Capt. J. L. Ray testified he arrested the riders for refusing to obey his order to move out of the terminals, nine in the Greyhound Bus Terminal, and the rest in the Illinois Central Terminal.

Texans Hit Back At Kidnap Charge

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—The head of a Houston detective agency Monday said Georgia authorities "don't have a leg to stand on" after Georgia officers filed kidnapping charges against two of his employees.

Bill Hay, head of the J. M. Rich Detective Agency, said, "The surety on the bond says the company has a right to go anywhere without process. Cases have gone to the Supreme Court and it's been proved they have that right and that authority."

Charged are W. E. Hayes and P. D. Reed, Johnson County (Ga.) Sheriff Roland Attaway said they are charged with returning Horace Parnell of Wrightsville to Houston to face a traffic charge without extradition papers.

H. O. Hawkins, head of the Houston FBI, said the FBI had investigated the case and referred it to the U.S. attorney in the Wrightsville area to determine whether a kidnapping had taken place.

"To my knowledge, there was no violation of the federal law," Hawkins said.

Capt. W. E. Isbell, Harris (Houston) County sheriff division head, said a federal law provides that any bondsman has the power to designate any person to bring back without a warrant a person who has jumped bond.

Parnell, 21, was arrested June 5 for driving while his license was suspended. He was released on $400 bond June 9. Chester Bas and James B. Turner were bondsmen.

Georgia's Chickens Dread the Dawn: 250,000 a Day Will Ride to Death

By BILL POPE
Constitution Staff Writer

GAINESVILLE — Just about every night, when the work day is over at one of North Georgia's poultry-processing centers, a visitor can spot three or four live broilers pacing aimlessly around.

They are the ones who managed to escape the fate of 250,000 of their brethren that day. Around the confinement pen they strut, blithely unaware that (a) tomorrow they die, (b) their be-feathered hides are worth only about 11 cents a pound on the farm-level market. For, alas, the chicken market is glutted as never before.

WITH THE DAWN

Comes the dawn and a truck stacked with coops of squawking broilers pulls up. The air is rent with gabble and a fine spray of feather dust. The birds are whisked off and hung by their feet on a moving chain conveyor. A deft worker slits their throats as they ride by.

Then they ride through a "bleeding vat" full of scalding water. The birds next travel through plucking machines. (The human chicken-plucker is a vanishing entity.) Within 40 minutes, the chickens have been singed, their feet, heads and necks lopped off, their viscera removed and they have been washed. Then they are dumped in slushed ice for several hours.

The parts of a chicken that can't be eaten are utilized in the form of byproducts. "We use everything but the cackle," says a Gainesville plant superintendent.

LARGEST SEGMENT

Poultry is the largest segment of Georgia agriculture, representing 28 per cent of total farm income. The income from poultry is larger than the total income from cotton, cottonseed, tobacco and corn. It is larger than the total income from cattle and calves, peanuts, hogs and forest products. And it is 30 times the income derived from peaches.

Georgia has led the nation in commercial broilers for the last 10 years. In 1960, Georgia produced enough broilers to provide seven for every family in the United States. Total value of poultry production in Georgia was approximately $275,000,000. An estimated 160,032 persons are engaged, in one way or another, in supplying poultry to consumers in Georgia and the nation.

The current depressed market price for broilers can be attributed in large part to the population explosion of the chickens themselves. This has come about as a result of improved methods of production. Poultry diseases, once the scourge of the industry, have been conquered for the most part. And when a bird reaches market age (at nine weeks), her raisers can't afford to let her cluck idly by. She is ready to be eaten and off she must go.

(We speak of "she" strictly out of gallantry. There are male broiler-fryer chickens and they are every bit as important to industry and the consumer as their sisters.)

Primarily, the nation's poultry industry thrives in areas where there was once low family income. In north Georgia, Arkansas and south Texas where incomes were low in the 30's and 40's, chicken-raising began to assume importance in the economic picture by 1950.

Though no one knows if the industry will be able to bring the lowest income states out of their present bracket at the bottom of the national scale, the fact remains that it will raise the average income tremendously.

But all the housewife cares about is that Betty Broiler can be broiled, simmered, roasted, fried, sautéed, barbecued. "Chicken," wrote one producer, "is like a loving wife — you can do almost anything to it and it remains dedicated to pleasing you."

And a French gourmet of the 19th century asked: "If Adam and Eve ruined themselves for an apple, what would they have done for a truffled fowl?"

35 in State Pass Exams For CPAs

COLUMBUS (AP) — Thirty-five candidates who recently passed the Georgia State Board of Accountancy written examination were announced Monday by William F. Laffin Sr., vice chairman of the board.

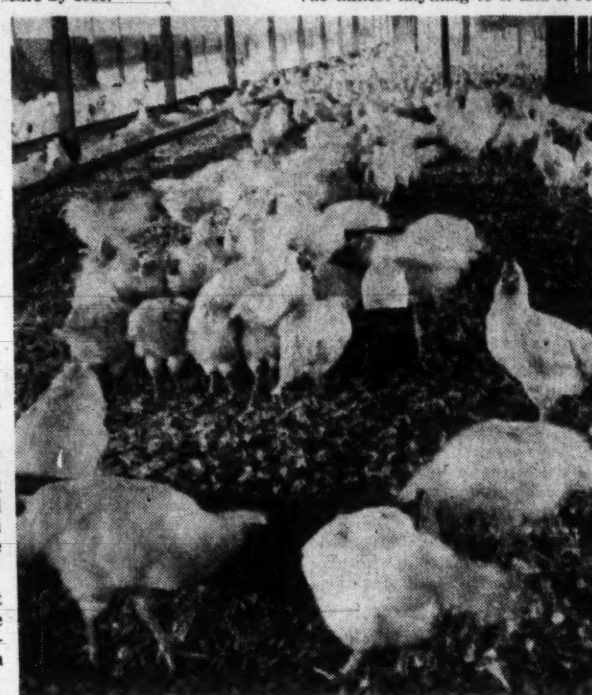

Successful candidates include Teddy J. Patrick, Richard S. Fenster, John A. Lanier Jr., James V. Johnson, Charles Meade Bradson, Charles C. Brannon, James M. May Jr., Norman S. Bould, Hugh A. Gower, Henry Edward Rollings, George B. Pennington, William H. Stewart, M. A. Ramos, Robert H. Gorin, Herman C. Shiver, Lyonel M. Joffe, Dewald S. Cohen and Truett L. Elder, all of Atlanta.

Marvin J. Johnson, James H. Leathers Jr., Joseph P. Baugus, Helen G. Serfling and Jesse W. Mize, all of Decatur.

Wayne Gilbert Jones, Uvalde; Bobby L. Whitmore, Tucker; Guy C. Carter, Albany; Martin E. Curtis III and W. M. Winn Jr., both of Macon; Robert M. Sieg Jr., Sidney Katz and Sidney Stetson Flemming III, all of Savannah; James E. Bates, Gainesville; Arthur S. Tate, East Point; Edwin Carl Martins Jr., Augusta, and John D. Abernathy III of Columbus.

CPA certificates will be awarded to the candidates who meet the experience requirements at an induction ceremony to be held in Atlanta in October.

With the cooperation of The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the test was administered to 262 candidates in 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

NORTH GEORGIA CHICKENS READY FOR MART

Wisconsin Capitol Is Shaken by Sit-In

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—A sit-in was staged in the Wisconsin capitol Monday in support of civil rights legislation pending in the legislature.

Twelve white persons and four Negroes were in the original group. About 50 members of the Madison chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and a dozen white University of Wisconsin students stood ready to take part.

Leaders of the demonstration said they planned to continue the sit-in around the clock until the legislature acts on the requested bills or adjourns.

The initial group of 16 seated themselves in rented folding chairs positioned at marble pillars ringing the main floor of the rotunda. A relief group was scheduled to take up the vigil and continue it through the night.

The demonstrators wore small lapel cards reading: "We're here for Wisconsin human rights legislation."

The demonstrators had printed statements that said the purpose of the sit-in was to call attention to Wisconsin's lack of legislation protecting minority groups from discrimination in housing, employment and public accommodations.

State to Get Half Million Child Aid

Georgia will receive more than $500,000 in federal aid for services to dependent children, State Welfare department officials said Monday.

The government funds will be used for salaries and expenses in carrying out the program of casework, foster care and child placement for Georgia's dependent children.

Mrs. Bertha Roberts, chief of the Child Welfare Department for Georgia, denied early reports that Georgia might not get this federal aid because it lacks enough professionally trained child welfare workers.

"This was totally untrue," she said. "Our funds were approved some time ago."

Mrs. Roberts said, however, that the spending program to use the federal allotment will give the 17 counties with professionally trained child welfare workers a slight edge. "We will give them a slightly larger percentage of the funds to give them an incentive for improving their professional status," she said.

The 17 counties with professional child welfare workers to receive this extra percentage include Clayton, DeKalb and Cobb. Fulton County does not participate as it has its own licensed child placement program.

Proposed DeKalb County Office Building

Here's how DeKalb County's new justice, education and administration building will look when it's completed. The $3 million structure, which will be constructed near the present county building, will house the commissioners, the courts and their offices, financial offices and the board of education. The building will be financed through the proposed bond issue, to be voted on Oct. 10.

Floyd Road Protest Fails on Widening

The State Highway Board answered a bitter double-cross charge Monday with a statement that a Floyd County highway will not be widened because a new $4.7 million four-lane highway has siphoned off most of its traffic.

The Floyd County delegation

Sleeper, 5, Falls From Window

CHATTANOOGA (AP)—A 5-year-old girl, apparently walking in her sleep during the night, toppled from the second-floor of her home and suffered a skull fracture.

Sheryl Ann Clinton was listed in fair condition Monday in a Chattanooga hospital.

fired off a bitter blast after the Highway department let a contract last Thursday that just resurfaced — not widened — narrow U.S. 411-Ga. 20 in Floyd County.

Representatives Sidney Lowrey, Robert L. Scoggin and J. Battle Hall complained that when their votes were sought for Gov. Vandiver's $100 million road repair program they were promised that their roads would be widened by four feet as well as resurfaced.

The highway board issued a statement expressing "regret that a misunderstanding has arisen" and reported that in the past they had promised that all improvements would be determined by the amount of traffic each road carries.

And only the most heavily traveled roads would be widened, the board said.

The board cited a traffic count that showed U.S. 411 at the Floyd-Bartow county line carried 2,057 vehicles a day before the opening of the new four-lane but only 636 a day after.

The board predicted that the old U.S. 411—some three miles south and parallel to the new four-lane—will handle only local traffic once the new route is officially designated U.S. 411.

The board also said U.S. 411 south from Rome to Cave Spring will be widened from 18 to 22 feet under a repair contract to be let Aug. 31.

"We feel that the inclusion of these contracts in the first two lettings under the bond program reflects our awareness of a need for—and a desire to—provide improvements for the routes in question. We regret that our intentions have been misunderstood or regarded as inadequate."

The Floyd representatives complained that they had promised the people in their county that roads would be widened and resurfaced.

"We are placed in a position of having lied to our people," the representatives said. "But, we wish it recorded here and now that same was based upon false promise from the highway officials concerned."

"ONE OF AMERICA'S FINEST"

Why Southern has offered reduced freight rates on grain moving to the South

FOR YEARS, the railroads have failed to recognize in their rate structure that grain can and does move in large volumes. Our grain freight rates have been based on loading 50 tons or less per car, shipped in single car lots. We are hauling very little grain. Unregulated barges and trucks are hauling the bulk of the grain. Our rates were simply too high to meet the prices set by these privately-owned barges and trucks.

We had lost a source of badly-needed revenue. So two years ago we began a study to correct it.

How We Can Afford To Reduce Our Rates

We quickly found a need to haul grain at less cost. Obviously, it couldn't be done with 50-ton loads and single-car shipments.

So we designed and built a covered-hopper car with a lightweight aluminum body, to haul over 100 tons of corn or wheat — a few tons less of lighter grains. Wasteful deadweight metal was swapped for payload grain. Switching costs at origin and destination points were cut in half because one 100-ton car takes the place of two 50-ton cars. Hauling costs are similarly reduced.

Further large economies were found through less terminal switching by hauling in volume shipments in lots of 5 cars, 10 cars, or 20 cars, moving at one time to one destination — with rates based on a minimum load of 90 tons per car. Paperwork was reduced as only one bill of lading is necessary for each lot of cars.

In brief, we simply "tied together" into a modern pricing policy our new high-capacity, lightweight aluminum cars, the advantages of multiple-car movements, and less paperwork. Now we have a new transportation service to sell—one that produces low-cost transportation which benefits grain growers, elevator operators, millers, and consumers while making us an attractive profit.

To show how this works, the present grain rate — which will still be available—from St. Louis to Gainesville, Ga., is $10.50 per net ton, shipped 50 tons in a single car. Our new rates are $3.97 per net ton when shipped in lots of 20 cars or 1,800 tons, $4.07 in lots of 10 cars or 900 tons, and $4.17 in lots of 5 cars or 450 tons. Similar reductions have been made between and to many other points, effective August 10.

This scale of reduced rates will also apply within the South from grain producing to grain consuming areas.

South's Grain Consumers Will Benefit

This is the happiest part of all — the fact that these rates will produce lower costs to benefit the people of the South who gain their livelihood from the poultry, livestock, feed, elevating, and milling industries. The general public using these products also gets lower prices.

Wholesome Effect On All Common Carriers

Other common carriers should feel little, if any, ill-effect from our new rates. Mostly they will be benefited because unregulated carriage by private barges and trucks will be reduced. All common carriers know that it is the private, unregulated carriers which are setting the competitive price they must meet. To be competitive, common carriers must find ways to move freight more efficiently at less cost, and to express these improvements in lowered rates that will greatly reduce the profit in private carriage. This we seek to do — to the ultimate benefit of all common carriers and the public at large. There is no other way for regulated common carriers — rail, truck, or barge — to remain solvent and make their needed contribution to the public welfare.

IN TOTAL EFFECT, THESE NEW REDUCED GRAIN FREIGHT RATES WILL BE WHOLLY GOOD AND GENUINELY IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST.

Stewart Granger Feels Cheated in Marriage

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

EUROPE—Stewart Granger believes that some of his closest friends are responsible for the break-up of his marriage with Jean Simmons, now married to Richard Brooks and with a baby. Stewart, starring for Titanus in "Sodom and Gomorrah," has no plans to return to the United States, and follows his current film with "Swordsmen of Siena."

At 47 I'm told that Stewart believes the best part of his life is behind him, and that somehow he was swindled out of his marriage with Jean. His hair is graying but he still looks very attractive. . . .

Another one who needs cheering-up in Rome is Granger's co-star Pier Angeli. Pier has said that she has been betrayed by her own people. She means compromising photographs and write-ups. But Pier likes the gay bright lights. And she prefers to dine and dance in the places where the press waits for a pretty in-a-whirl little movie stars.

Curt Jurgens is receiving $200,000 for his role in "The Jackals" with Louis Jourdan, Maurice Chevalier, Jean Gabin and "we hope to get a big Hollywood actress." Director Terence Young told me. This is another picture to be made in Rome and Paris.

Ed "Kookie" Byrnes, a big hit with the younger set in London, told them that he is tired of playing the parking lot boy in "77 Sunset Strip," and he'll have his own series next time, in which he'll play the private-eye boss.

I wonder why they billed Diana Dors in London with a Miss in front of her "On the Double," film with nothing in front for Danny Kaye, Dana Wynter and Margaret Rutherford. The Miss was not a bit. None of the critics liked the picture.

But they are prepared to love Bob Hope who went from the railway station to his car in a Rickshaw (plug for "Road to Hong Kong.") And Bing Crosby, both of whom posed for pictures, taking tea and crumpets. No wonder they call Mori Sahl the new comedian.

Anthony Quinn has a busy schedule following his "Barabara" movie. He'll star in New York in the film version of "Requiem for a Heavyweight" which Jack Palance did on TV. Then, of all things, Tony will star in a Broadway musical for Josh Logan. Actually, he should take a long rest after his present picture. "But how can I," he told me on the Jerusalem set. "Here I'm getting the parts I should have been doing 15 years ago, and they're begging me to play them."

Sophia Loren who works even harder than Mr. Quinn, has agreed to co-star with Danny Kaye in "Five Pieces of Maria" for Panama and Frank in London. Before that, also in London, Sophia co-stars with David Niven in "Shocking."

I have always loved Joan Greenwood's strange voice, but she overdoes it in her current West End play, "The Irregular Verb to Love." Joan pitches her husky voice so high, I could hardly understand a word of what she said.

Melina Mercouri argued with a British newspaperman who told her on the set of "S.S. Phaedra," that her fiancé Jules Dassin, should not have played the American in "Never on Sunday." "He was better than Jimmy Stewart would have been," insisted the Greek actress, which goes to show how much she loves him.

Jack Palance has resurrected the 1921 Broadway play, "The Jester," which starred "John and Lionel Barrymore." And I'm hoping to get John Barrymore Junior to play his father's role in the film. Jack told me. He added that contrary to report, Young John was very happy in Rome with his Italian actress wife. That big fight we read about, Jack stated flatly, "was rigged." Don't any film couples really quarrel in Rome?

Rossellini is busy in Rome with "Vanina," from the Stendhal novel — all Italian and French actors. He, too, now prefers the quiet life and has promised never to battle again with Ingrid Bergman, who is content because she has their three children with her.

Jerry Wald fell in love with Venice and he will film the Hemingway story, "Across the River and Into the Trees," in Venice, starring William Holden. It will be in winter, black and white to capture Venice in the snow.

Director Fellini opens his segment of "Boccaccio 70" with an enormous poster of Anita Ekberg, with the men in her life, a few inches high, looking up at her. Is this the Italian idea of sex appeal—the overpowering female, the insignificant male.

Scouting TV

New West Gang Ranch Is Best Bet

By THE TV SCOUT
BEST BET—Focus on America presents a fascinating look at the life of modern cowboys who work the biggest ranch in North America—the million-acre Gang Ranch in British Columbia.

The time is the present but the life these men (and one woman ranch-hand) lead is much the same as the turn-of-the-century Westerner. The young, mostly single, crew includes some Indians and some European immigrants. They work seven days a week from sunup to after sundown, in all weather conditions, for $15 a month—meat, bread, beans and coffee. They must supply their own saddles, boots and lariats. 7-7:30 (Ch. 11).

8-8:30 (Ch. 11)—Agnes Moorehead appears on The Rifleman in a repeat story about a sweet little old lady who collects wanted posters the way today's youngsters collect baseball cards. She's the most genteel bounty hunter you've ever met. In her nice way, she makes life miserable for an outlaw in North Fork but pleasant for TV viewers in an amusing and off-beat Western.

8:30-9 (Ch. 5)—Dobie Gillis gets a bit serious in this repeat show. There are plenty of laughs but there also is a point made: School is good for kids and those who drop out are making a big mistake. One would hardly expect to find Dobie (Dwayne Hickman) and Maynard (Bob Denver) agreeing but they do and firmly, too.

9-10 (Ch. 2)—Mary Astor, a truly fine actress, has a meaty role in Thriller and she makes the most of it. The repeat story, "Rose's Last Summer," is typical of the early plots on this series—horribly involved and unconvincing but Miss Astor shines as an alcoholic ex-star who is used as part of an insurance scheme.

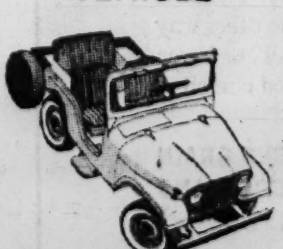

9-10 (Ch. 11)—Tuesday's Stagecoach West repeat is loosely based on organizations of Irish rebels that tracked down traitors to carry out their kangaroo court executions. Sean McClory appears as Finn McCool—one of the few times Irish-born McClory has played an Irishman. McCool, the target for a team of executioners, leads them a not-so-merry chase right to Halfway House where our heroes become involved in the action. McClory makes McCool into a charming rogue for some good action here.

9:30-11 (Ch. 5)—Playhouse 90 repeats "Target for Three," a show that is even more timely today than it was originally in 1959. In a Caribbean country, some revolutionaries become as evil as the evil people they oust, a lesson the world has learned the hard way. Ricardo Montalban and George C. Scott play two of the three men assigned to kill a ruthless dictator. Montalban gains access to the presidential palace, finds the dictator and his family basically pleasant people, and begins to do some serious thinking. TV Scout found this play just as engrossing and suspenseful the second time around.

10-11 (Ch. 2)—"The Trapped Housewife" as seen on Specials for Women repeat, presents the "housewife" designation which causes all kinds of difficulties for family, friends and neighbors. There's a lot of psychological jargon as sociological experts discuss these frustrated disenchanted and pathetic creatures. Some good points are made but all the shows in this series are given to oversimplification and wide, wide generalizations. Phyllis Thaxter and Michael Strong play the leading roles in the dramatic portions of the show.

Storms, Floods Batter Nation

Thunderstorms from the Corn Belt to the Bowery and deep into Dixie swamped New York's subways, unroofed homes in the Ohio Valley and brought flash floods to Virginia Monday.

Severe storms along the Ohio-Indiana border caused up to $100,000 damage at Eldorado, Ohio, Monday night. Houses were damaged, barns flattened and utility lines downed. Mrs. Sam Holsapple was milking a cow in her barn when the storm struck, ripping away the barn and milking machine and leaving her seated beside the cow. First reports indicated that a tornado may have hit the area.

GM, Union Kill Their Contract

By ROBERT IRVIN
DETROIT (UPI)—The United Auto Workers and General Motors Monday canceled their 1958 contracts covering 310 thousand workers, effective at midnight Aug. 31.

UAW Vice president Leonard Woodcock, voicing impatience with the progress of negotiations, handed GM a formal contract cancellation notice when the two sides resumed their bargaining sessions Monday afternoon.

Three hours later, GM vice president Louis G. Seaton sent the UAW a letter saying, "We have now also decided to exercise our right to terminate the national agreement."

Both sides expressed hope that with a 30-day deadline now before them, negotiations will be speeded up and an agreement reached before the end of the month.

But GM proposed that if an agreement is not reached by that time, the two sides should consider a limited extension of the present contract "if the progress of our negotiations then indicates that such an extension might be mutually desirable and beneficial."

Trees and barns
High winds bowled over trees and unroofed barns near Ruffin, South Carolina.

Electrical storms jolted Texas' Gulf Coast. Mrs. Fritz Kloecker, 61, was killed by a lightning bolt at her home 10 miles south of Navasota. In the town, lightning struck a home and the resulting fire destroyed it.

Severe thunderstorm warnings were posted for parts of Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia.

At Haysi, Va., 16 persons were trapped for hours by a flash flood which many said was worse than the $1 million inundation of 1957. Five homes and two general stores were washed away. A church, theater and garage were damaged severely by rain-caused rock slides.

SUBWAYS BLOCKED
Up to 2.5 inches of rain fell in six hours in New York. Water blocked subways and highways and knocked the Pennsylvania Railroad out of action for two hours, stranding at least 10,000 commuters. Two trains were trapped temporarily in a tunnel under the Hudson River by a power failure, stranding 600 travelers.

Flooding disrupted service on at least two subway lines in New York and blocked auto expressways at at least three points.

SEASON'S WARMEST
Meanwhile, nearby Indianapolis registered its warmest temperature of the season—92 degrees. The mercury climbed to 106 at Yuma, Ariz., and 105 at Blythe, California.

The U.S. Weather Bureau at Washington, D.C., saw relief from the heat for the Northeast and far Southwest in the next 30 days, but other sections of the nation were expected to continue sweltering. The long-range forecast called for warmer than usual readings in Dixie and the Pacific Northwest with normal heat elsewhere in the United States.

His Pet Goat The Best Goat, Says Sandburg

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Carl Sandburg told North Carolina's governor Monday he'd like to enter a pet goat in that state's International Trade Fair.

"My goat gives more milk than any goat in the state of North Carolina," the noted poet-author told Gov. Terry Sanford. "It gives it's weight in milk."

Sandburg and the governor met at 20th Century-Fox studios, where Sanford named him poet-laureate of the trade fair at Charlotte from Oct. 12-24.

"You're one of our finest and favorite citizens," the governor told Sandburg, a native of North Carolina. "I feel that arts should also be represented at the fair, and we couldn't find a better representation of art and culture than you."

Sandburg said he would attend the event, which is to be opened by President John F. Kennedy, if "everything goes the way I think it will go."

Aspiring Doctors Pay $2,500, Get Advance Look at Tests

NEW YORK (AP)—Four prospective physicians paid $2,500 each for an advance look at qualifying examinations scheduled to be given to 600 applicants June 27, a state regent official said Monday.

But the plot was uncovered, the tests were changed, and the money was returned, the official added.

Licensing examinations were held in Albany, Syracuse, Buffalo and New York City. Both the state and New York County district attorney's office are investigating charges of irregularities.

The disclosures came three days after Dr. James E. Allen, state education commissioner, announced the resignation of Dr. Stiles E. Ezell as secretary of the State Board of Medical Examiners. Dr. Allen did not state a reason for Ezell's resignation but said evidence from a state probe was being turned over to Frank Hogan, New York County district attorney.

August J. Bardo, regents division director of professional conduct, testified in Hogan's office Monday that one candidate had collected $10,000 for advance copies of the tests, given largely to foreigners seeking licenses to practice medicine in the state. Names of those involved were not given.

SOMERVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A five-million-member Negro religious organization made the final payment Monday on its "freedom farm" in Fayette County.

The $60,000 farm was bought by the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc., as the first step in a long-range plan to help Negro sharecroppers to become prosperous farmers.

'Blondes' Musical To Be Real Gem

By STAN JACKSON

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"—a rollicking, frolicsome musical comedy created on a theory of male preference as well as the supposition that gals have eyes only for gems—will open Tuesday night at the Theater Under the Stars.

Based on a book of the same name by Anita Loos and Joseph Fields and a Broadway comedy by Miss Loos.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" stars Dossie Hollingsworth as a dizzy, money-conscious femme fatale, Lorelei Lee, whose life's ambition is to hook a guy with an inexhaustible supply of money.

Lorelei's personal philosophy is aptly summed up in her two main songs, "A Little Girl From Little Rock" and "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend."

She is a gal who sparkles—and an assortment of jewels worth $85,000 will add to Miss Hollingsworth's portrayal of a diamond-hungry blonde.

Arrangements were made with Citizens Jewelry Co. of Atlanta to secure the famous Westminster tiara along with other jewelry in a collection of 1,421 diamonds owned by a New York collector.

The opening curtain finds two free and easy American girls and an American sugar daddy sailing to France aboard the French liner, "Le de France."

One of the girls is delighted, needless to say, to find that the American Olympic team is sailing with them.

But Lorelei doesn't have much interest in the athletes. She's after richer bait.

They come to gay Paris, to the Ritz and the Pre-Catalan restaurant in the Bois de Boulogne, and finally return home to celebrate at the Central Park Casino.

Dorothy Shaw shares the spotlight as Lorelei's eager companion. Marvin Worden, whose tenor voice has captured audiences in the Theater Under the Stars' three previous presentations, portrays Gus Esmond.

An assortment of songs adds to the play's more frantic and also gentler moments.

"Mamie Is Mine" is a hot American novelty number presented in a Paris night spot, and the finale, "Keeping Cool with Collidge" is indicative of the spirit of the Roarin' 20s.

"You Say You Care" and "Just a Kiss Apart" are two songs filled with sentiment and elements of romance. Lyrics are by Leo Robin and the composer is Jay Styne.

Other characters in this tale of flappers, Frenchmen and fun are Henry Spofford (Jim Tushar), Sir Francis (Fred Harper), Lady Beekman (Mimi Hone), Mrs. Spofford (Martha Barron), Joseph Gage (Charles Frasch) and Gloria (Ginger Prince).

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" was seen in Atlanta in 1955 when Miss Hollingsworth also starred as Lorelei. The show was then highly praised—called a "rib-splitter" . . . "the best of the season" by reviewers.

Good Health Prescription Required As Safeguard

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why, if tranquilizers are good to quiet jittery nerves and don't contain narcotics and aren't habit-forming, must one have a prescription from a doctor before they can be purchased?—Mrs. L. D. E.

The question of whether a drug requires a prescription is up to the federal authorities, who insist on prescriptions as a matter of public safety.

They have good reasons as to why they demand prescriptions for tranquilizers. First, you forgot to mention what we call side effects. These are any undesired consequences of the use of a drug . . . and with today's powerful medications, it isn't easy to find any that don't have side effects at least some of the time.

A drug, by its very nature, has a definite impact on the body. Many drugs, indeed most, are substances that are helpful in small quantities but harmful if used excessively.

Side effects may range from minor to extremely grave. There may be itching, nervousness, stomach upsets, fatigue, sniffles, disturbances of vision, dryness of mouth and nose, or hives, and we could go on for quite a while. Most of these, of course, aren't too disastrous, although in certain circumstances some of them can be.

Some drugs, other than in tiny quantities, are poisons. Some like the useful penicillin, can cause dangerous allergies in certain people. Some occasionally cause blood disturbances. Some can alter the normal body chemistry, causing lack of necessary chemicals, or an oversupply of others. Some drugs tend to cause bleeding. Some make water accumulate in the body. Some dry out the body. Need I go on? Even aspirin, used to massive excess, has caused a great many deaths, mostly among little children. Yet aspirin is "same" enough not to require a prescription.

A prescription is a protection in several ways. First, there are specific instructions as to how much to take and how often. Second, the patient has a doctor to notify in case any trouble starts to develop. Third, an uninformed patient can't just go buy a vial of some medicine, and keep buying it in large quantities, without prescription records showing it.

2 Theaters Sold; Rialto And Central

Two Atlanta movie houses, the Rialto and Central theaters, have been acquired by the Martin Theater chain of Columbus.

The deal was announced simultaneously Monday by Moses Lebowitz of Chattanooga, Tenn., president of Independent Theaters, Inc., and Roy and E. D. Martin, owners of the Columbus-based chain.

The Rialto and Central houses, both owned by Independent, were part of a 10-theater sale package. The other eight Independent theaters sold are in Chattanooga. The selling price was not disclosed.

When Independent Theaters bought the two Atlanta theaters from Charles Mion in 1954, the purchase price was reported to be $250,000.

The Rialto's early success was assured when it became the outlet for some of Columbia Pictures' most profitable movies of the 1930s and 40s such as "It Happened One Night" and "The Johnson Story." The Luckie Street house has a capacity of 927 seats.

The Central, seating 500 patrons at its Whitehall Street, S.E., location, recently was remodeled inside and out.

The Martin organization currently owns and operates more than 100 theaters in Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Tennessee and Kentucky. The firm also operates two television outlets, WYVM in Columbus and WTVO in Chattanooga.

Robert Moscow of Atlanta has been associated as a business partner in Independent Theaters, supervising operations of the Rialto and Central.

Brand Names Sell

Advertised brands in the 38 most important categories of packaged goods take in about 75 per cent of total packaged goods sales. Advertisers rely on newspapers to put their sales messages across—their expenditures in newspapers total more than their expenditures in radio, TV, magazines and outdoor combined.

Fulton Man Given 25 Yrs. in Shooting

Home Demonstration Agent, 61, Wounded Near Palmetto

A young man from south Fulton County pleaded guilty Monday to charges of shooting a 61-year-old home demonstration agent in her home near Palmetto. He was sentenced to serve 25 years in prison.

Fulton Superior Judge Jephtha C. Tanksley told 21-year-old Donald Newell Bryant before sentencing him:

"You are lucky you are not being tried for murder."

T. C. Allen Runs for School Job

T. Charles Allen, Atlanta attorney, has announced that he is a candidate for the Fifth Ward Board of Education seat being vacated by L. J. (Jim) O'Callaghan.

Allen is immediate past president of the Atlanta Bar Association and a partner in the law firm of Nall, Miller, Cadenhead and Dennis.

In announcing for the school post, Allen said, "I am offering for the school board in order to seek a continuation of the constructive and realistic program of the present board. I am impressed that Jim O'Callaghan has made an outstanding contribution to this community through his service on the board, and it is after conferring with a majority of the current membership of the board, and with a desire to see our school system maintain its present posture, that I have decided to run for the seat."

Allen lives with his wife, the former Frances Felder, and their four children at 2072 Cottage Lane NW. He is a graduate of Emory University with B.A. and LL.B. degrees. Allen is a major in the Marine Corps Reserve and served in both World War II and the Korean War as a Marine pilot. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with four Oak Leaf clusters.

State's Wives Outlive Husbands by 5 to 1

Lady, the odds are five to one you'll outlive your husband, if you live in Georgia.

Latest Bureau of Census figures show that Georgia ranks 13th in the nation in the number of widowed persons, and most of them are women.

Widows outnumber widowers 192,243 to 40,702. The state ranks 13th in the number of widows, too.

The figure 13 fits the state in another category: Since 1950 Georgia added 26,715 widowed persons to its population for a rate of gain of 13 per cent.

Still Plenty to Wear

Women who have "absolutely nothing to wear" will be glad to know that more than 3,000 manufacturers employing about 105,000 workers are trying to satisfy their demands. During the past two years, national apparel advertisers spent more than $17 million in newspapers to tell people that "there is plenty to wear."

2 U.S. Attorneys Sworn In Here

Two new assistant U.S. District Attorneys have been sworn into office here, Charles L. Goodson, district attorney, announced Monday.

The assistants are Bobby Cook Milam of Fairburn and Allen Chancey Jr. of Atlanta.

Chancey, a former member of Atlanta's Board of Education, is a University of Georgia graduate and has practiced law in Atlanta for several years.

2 Arrested In Rob-Ride Of Atlantan

Two men were arrested Monday at Fort Payne, Ala., in connection with the abduction and robbery of an Atlantan and were returned here, police said.

The two, Marion Russell Stew-are, 32, of Nashville, Tenn., and Robert M. Folsom, 29, of Valdosta, were held in Atlanta on robbery charges. Detectives O. L.
Adams and J. H. Landrum said.

Detectives said the two admitted the Sunday kidnap-robbery of William Lamar Otwell of 276
Lakeview Ave., N.E., and explained: "We were drinking."

FORCED WAY IN

Otwell, an oil company employee, said two men forced their way into his car in downtown
Atlanta, drove him to a spot near Dallas, Ga., robbed him, stripped him of his clothing and tied him to a tree, then drove off in his car.

Clad only in his shorts, Otwell managed to free himself and go for help. Atlanta officers said Otwell reported the incident to the Paulding County sheriff's office and that the Alabama Highway Patrol halted the car near Fort Payne.

The two occupied Otwell's auto, officers said, and his billfold was found under the seat.

REPORTS THEFT

Otwell told police the two took a charge plate, credit card, University of Georgia class ring, wrist watch, the suit he was wearing and his shoes. He said they used his necktie to bind his hands to the tree.

One man entered the car when he stopped for a traffic signal at Cain Street and Techwood Drive NW, Otwell was quoted as saying. He said the man held a knife on him and ordered him to drive around the block where the second got into the car at a parking lot.

He said they stopped at a service station on Highway 41 and purchased soft drinks, then stopped at a package store and got two cartons of beer.

Vocational School Signs 25 in DeKalb

Twenty-five students already have registered for DeKalb County's new vocational-technical school, Paul Lowery, who will head the school, said Monday.

The school, in temporary quarters at Scottdale Elementary School on E. Ponce de Leon Avenue, will accept applicants up until opening date, which will be some time late in September, according to Lowery.

The school can accommodate 40 students in mechanical, electrical and electronics technology.

Earlier, DeKalb Superintendent of Schools Jim Cherry said that because of the highly technical nature of the courses, students will be required to take 50 hours of class and laboratory work per week for two years to graduate.

Applicants must have a high school education or its equivalent or experience to register. The courses offered will include drafting and design, human relations, machine shop, tool and die design, electricity and electronics.

No charge is made for registration, but students will be required to pay for course materials.

Car Named 'Jailbird' Tailed in Burglary

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — Police were confident Monday they could spot a car seen parked at nearby Waterville, where a service station was burglarized of $24 and several cartons of cigarettes.

Officers said the vehicle, with Colorado license plates, had two large white eyes painted above the headlights, the words "Jailbird" and "The Beast" painted on the body and front fender, and the diagram of a jail house on the trunk lid.

Announcing the first major tooth paste advance since fluoride... now IPANA has Hexa-Fluoride

How brushing with new Ipana helps you protect your gums as you protect your teeth

Dental authorities agree—you can lose more teeth from gum troubles than from tooth decay

According to published reports, gum troubles are often caused by tartar that forms on teeth when soft film is not properly cleansed away. And dental statistics prove it is gum troubles, not tooth decay, that cause most loss of teeth after age 14. So don't do just half the job. Protect your gums as you protect your teeth.

If you brush properly with new Ipana with Hexa-Fluoride, you can help prevent gum trouble due to tartar before it starts. Ipana's film-removing agents help you brush away the soft film that naturally forms on teeth before it hardens into tartar that irritates and inflames gums.

Only your dentist or dental hygienist can remove tartar from your teeth once it hardens. But you should know this: proper brush-ing, according to Ipana directions, can help prevent tartar before it attacks your gums.

A superior decay-fighter, too—destroys more decay bacteria than any other leading brand

New Ipana now contains Hexa-Fluoride, the first major tooth paste advance since the introduction of fluoride. It helps you fight tooth decay because it is a combination of both hexachlorophene and fluoride—a fluoride accepted by Public Health Authorities for use in drinking water.

Ipana with hexachlorophene destroys millions of decay germs with each brushing. And fluoride strengthens the enamel of your teeth.

So proper brushing with new Ipana with exclusive Hexa-Fluoride helps protect you now
...and in the future, too.

Laboratory tests prove that Ipana with Hexa-Fluoride has more decay-germ killing power than any other leading tooth paste, fluoride or not! Get new Ipana for your family. Look for the name "Hexa-Fluoride" on the Ipana carton. If your favorite store

GIRLS RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIPS FROM MISS IRA JARRELL
L-R: Linda Coogle, Carol Crowley and Jacquelyn Kohn

March of Dimes Scholarships Won by 3 Atlanta Girls

Three Atlanta area girls Monday were awarded four-year, $500 health scholarships by the National Foundation.

Jacquelyn Kohn, 2655 Pinetree Road, NE, received a scholarship in the field of medical social work; Linda Rose Coogle, 175 Burdett Road, NW, won hers in the area of occupational therapy; and Carol May Crowley, 3431 Cataline Drive, Chamblee, was rewarded for her work in physical therapy.

This is the third year the health scholarships have been awarded by the National Foundation and the three local recipients are among 515 students who annually receive the scholarships.

Miss Kohn is a graduate of North Fulton High School and has been attending the Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans for two years. She will leave in September to enroll at the University of London, Bedford College, London as a participant in the Tulane-Newcomb junior year abroad program.

A June graduate of Sandy Springs High School, Miss Coogle will attend Richmond Professional Institute, College of William and Mary in Richmond, Va. In high school she was a member of the National Honor Society, Beta Club and was voted one of the 12 most outstanding seniors.

Miss Crowley, a Chamblee High School June graduate, will attend the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville.

"We are proud of our talented 1961 winners from Fulton and DeKalb counties," stated Miss Ira Jarrell, school committee chairman, who presented the girls with their scholarships. "Our young people will one day help relieve the acute shortage of trained personnel in the health fields, a shortage that becomes more serious every day."

Rezoning For Plant Is Assailed

Irate residents, at an "emergency meeting" called to protest a DeKalb County rezoning decision which would pave the way for new industrial plants, leveled and audience-participated attack on the recent ruling Monday night in the cafeteria of the Immaculate Heart of Mary School.

Speaking before a group of North Druid Hills, Briarcliff and Clairmont area residents and civic club members, a five-man panel—including DeKalb County Planning Commission Director W. M. Lundberg—discussed, argued and supported both sides of the movement to invite industry into the county.

OTHERS ON PANEL

Panel members, in addition to Lundberg, included John B. Collins, Timothy Drive Civic Club president; Frank Cantrell, a 15-year resident of DeKalb County; William Varalla, civic club member, and William N. Cox, industrial engineering professor at Georgia Tech.

The group was protesting the rezoning of a large tract of land at North Druid Hills Road and the Northeast Expressway which was changed from residential-agricultural use to industrial use at the commissioner's meeting last Tuesday.

TIRED OF REZONING

"Most of us were quite tired of rezoning petitions a long time ago," Cox stated. "I warn you, though, we can't afford to be tired or the politicians will move in and win out over the protests of the residents."

"Nobody argues about zoning laws when they are sound," he continued. "But we do object when they are twisted. The commission chose one Roscoe Pickett (owner of the proposed industrial site) over 500 or 600 objecting residents. Is this fair?"

Ultra-Violet Powder Traps 2 in Tire Theft

Two detectives Monday had little doubt they would find fluorescent powder on the hands of two burglary suspects.

Detectives L. W. Cook and L. S. West said they sprinkled the powder, which is visible only under an ultra violet ray light, on tires in a warehouse at 1435 Hills Place, NW, and sat back to watch.

Two men entered the building and began rolling out the tires, detectives related. They moved in for the arrests.

Detectives said an examination with the light revealed the presence of plenty of powder on the hands of John Ernest McCarty, 17, of a Jones Avenue, NW, address, a warehouse employee, and Carter Taylor, 34, of a Tatnall Street, SW, address.

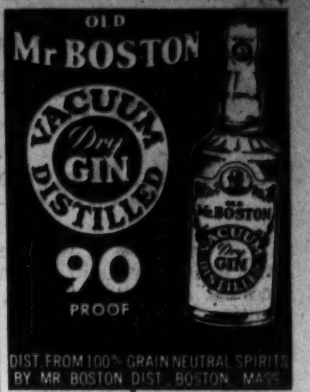

The two, Negroes, were held for suspicion of burglary.

"We may have to go to the courts," Cox advised in offering a possible remedy.

Director Lundberg defended the rezoning, arguing that it would be beneficial and that, due to population growth and a change of times, rezoning laws are necessary. His remarks were interrupted frequently by the audience.

"Because there are very few property owners near the industrial area," Lundberg stated, "there are few people who will be adversely affected."

Work Is Best Welfare Method

The abuse of welfare grants in Newburg, N.J., which has brought a sharp clash between state, federal and city officials, has stirred up some attention long overdue.

Since the lean years of the depression when immediate food and shelter was a matter of life or death for millions of Americans, the mushroom of public welfare has continued to grow, to drift, inevitably to take on new meanings and opportunities for free-loading for those with the guile to sense the several open avenues.

Doris

This has been evident since the beginning, and it is not to the discredit of welfare officials or social workers that we have not bothered to recognize it. In fact, we preferred not to think of it at all. Welfare agencies have progressed as they could, pinched between the rules of tight-fisted lay regulating boards and the law of the land fashioned like an old-fashioned Hoover apron—large enough to cover everything and loose enough to fit nothing.

What agencies have needed, in their ministrations to our human failures, has been the support of taxpaying citizens determined that depressed persons be lifted back to their feet, balanced, shown a new path to walk, and in the beginning, helped to walk it.

For example, it has been possible for years to chart from black and white pins on our city map, the areas in Atlanta where relief moneys have been gulped away without any appreciable improvement in the well being of the squalid areas involved.

Recipients have ranged from the disabled and crippled, the mentally incompetent, the migrant, the grossly ignorant to deserted mothers with broods of children begotten and forgotten by their wandering fathers. These latter we have had in frightening numbers, terrible symptoms of deep-rooted sicknesses of irresponsibility, lovelessness, unmanliness, or, in some cases, unwomanliness.

And there have been the loafers, the degenerates, the hypochondriacs, the fakes, the misfits, the immoral and amoral—and always a smattering of smart ones who have learned how to slip in under the red tape of the general rules.

These people would never have fitted into a normal job. For competitive industry and business, they have been unemployable.

But they have needed work, for physical and spiritual rebuilding, for self-respect, and it has been within the power of our business community to provide it. A civilization that can chart the way to the moon can surely figure out a way to get a small factory lodged in depressed communities where hands trembling from alcoholism, from illness or from despair could perform repetitive tasks which might be useful to society.

Why is work, sheltered work that women also might do for a few hours a day while children are at school, never considered in the prescription for welfare? Isn't self-sufficiency what we are aiming for, when we hold out the hand of public support for faltering people?

The Goodwill Industries do this kind of reclamation for physically handicapped men and women, and they do it well, with dignity and respect.

Why, since we have this example, are there not other centers for gainful work provided automatically as an assignment, after a case-work investigation, along with a relief check?

This does not have to be public work if that is against public policy. We can avoid the cry of bureaucracy. It does not have to be WPA all over again. It could be privately financed, or perhaps supported partially by foundation money directed to the rehabilitation of people. Foundation subsidy would relieve the possibility of accusations of exploitation.

The protests would come. The alarms would sound from conservatives and liberals alike, and more than those, from congenial dolesters.

But somewhere in this problem there is a courageous, human course brave leaders could walk with honor and true charity.

Ideas Are Key To Diet

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Exciting ideas stimulate the imagination. Anything that lifts you out of the rutted-in habit pattern enlivens your interest and renews your enthusiasm. The magic is within yourself.

Your goal in summer slimming is to be one whole dress size slimmer ere it is time to buy a new fall dress. Go window shopping. Or, if you have a favorite fall dress in your wardrobe, one that is too small, hang it out in plain sight. Visualize yourself wearing it smoothly.

The mental reminders which helped one young mother to win through to victory bear reprinting, and midsummer is an ideal time. Here they are . . .

"Having dieted many times, I know well what the struggle is like. From your column and my own thinking, I have written five helping rules for becoming slim . . . and staying slim.

1. Focus your thoughts on your goal always. Thinking positively, in terms of what you want, makes for success. Thinking of eating forbidden food will only lead to finding excuses for doing so. When your mind veers to thoughts of food at odd hours, flash on your inner mind the picture of you, wearing that size slimmer dress. Picture your friends congratulating you on your slimmer figure.

2. Be faithful to yourself. By keeping on in the direction of good food habits, you are doing yourself an enormous favor! Here's a tip . . . eat only during the specified times of day and you will want food only at these times. This becomes habit . . . beautiful habit.

3. When tempted to go on a "spree" . . . pull yourself out of that rut by realizing that overindulgence now can undo all your previous days of trying. Immediately switch to your new way of thinking and picturing success.

4. Change your attitude about food. Know what you want and then make advance decisions along certain lines. "Set" your mind to hurdle any obstacle.

Patriotism or Pale Faces? Women Heed Call to Colors

Atlanta women—at least one group of them—are ready to answer the Call to Colors in their own patriotic way, though it may make them pale faces.

Many are willing to go on paying through the nose—really the lips and fingertips—the 10 per cent excise tax on cosmetics. That is, they're willing if it will help President Kennedy's new defense program.

The long battle that started in World War II when the tax was levied on toiletries and other "luxuries" like furs and leather goods has flared anew recently. Six U.S. Congressmen

Local gals like the idea of repeal, all right. But not at the expense of unbalancing the defense budget.

"We're not in favor of its repeal," proclaimed Mrs. Ruby Davidson, legislative chairman of the 300-strong business gals' group, "in view of the present grave situation."

Her group considers it "untimely, unrealistic and unpatriotic" to consider dropping any taxes at this crucial moment, she said.

"We would most certainly be for the repeal," Mrs. Howard Nix Jr. of Atlanta opined, "unless it would hurt the economy."

Another group of Atlanta girls who live by their looks as well as their business know-how had a still different viewpoint. They are members of the National Secretaries Assn.

"If the President wants to build morale, he should start by making make-up available to women at the lowest price possible," Mrs. Kathryn Shepard, a club officer, opined.

Mrs. Jean S. Marshall, secretary to Atlanta's famed golfer Bobby Jones, took this realistic approach:

"I just hope we don't have to pay more taxes," the attractive career woman said. "But if the federal government needs them, I won't complain."

Most of the working girls agreed that a girl couldn't hold a job if she didn't use her lipstick, face powder and perfume strategically.

Tax Eased On Cosmetics In France

PTA Sparks Summer Fun For Students

Mothers in the Toney School neighborhood won't admit whether it was their children's well being or their own that triggered their first summer recreation program.

Anyhow, the kids are pleased. Some 100 boys and girls of grammar school age are attending the six weeks' program sponsored by Toney School PTA.

"It's not like school," assures Mrs. Robert Engbretnsen, PTA chairman of the project. "The children aren't shuttled from class to class."

The program is more a drop in and out affair, from 12 noon to 4 p.m. every weekday, with informality and fun as the theme.

PTA leaders hit on the idea a year ago. The neighborhood is too new to have its own city recreation program.

EDUCATING

"We had lots of educating to do," Mrs. Engbretnsen recalls. Children and mothers were reluctant in the beginning, thinking it would be a formal class affair.

Instead, the program aims to let the young people meet their friends, play games and learn a few, simple crafts.

The PTA allocated $200 to buy initial equipment and each child was charged $1 for summer membership. They buy only craft materials that they specifically use.

The teaching staff was recruited from mothers, with one paid teacher, Mrs. Ken Patterson of the Toney School faculty.

About 20 mothers teach one or two hours each week.

school cafeteria and expanded into four classrooms, due to the large attendance.

The busiest areas have been: the ping pong table, two shuffleboard courts and chess and checker tables.

Embroidery and sewing classes have been popular for the girls, so much so that they were broken down into age groups.

TOP WOODWORKER

Mrs. Alfred Attaway, the neighborhood's top woodworker, has introduced her craft to both girls and boys.

And a class in tile and plaque painting has drawn a big attendance.

"We made mistakes and fumbled getting started," Mrs. Engbretnsen admits.

Definite classes set up by age groups should have been announced before the program's start and parents should have been notified, she believes. This would have kept down confusion.

But she considers the new venture a success.

How to Attract a Man? Explain Women to Him!

Pick up any magazine and usually there's a bright little piece on How To Attract Men. Nobody writes for men on the subject of luring women. Perhaps it is just as well.

What man you know would read such stuff... let alone be guided by it? The oldest pat formula for holding masculine attention is to get the fellow to talking about himself. Look into his eyes, they all say, and with a soft, dove-like tone murmur: "Now, John, tell me about yourself."

Pull that one these days and you're dead. This tip has been banging about since great-grandma was a juvenile. Now it is a cliché, an obvious trap that can terrify the most tireless talker of all.

It's still good to let a man do some talking. You can sit and watch his mouth! V-e-r-y disconcerting. It isn't that he just wants to talk about himself, but he does enjoy the sound of his own voice.

Ask him questions. Like, "What are the things men don't understand about women?" Then sit forward, listen, and watch each syllable that falls from his lips.

Men do not understand how a woman knows when another woman is older than she says she is, or how she can tell from a single meeting whether some other woman is the real thing, or a play-acting phony. And this: How you know at once when a woman has dyed her hair. Or, with no price tag to guide you, how you can tell what price range her dress is in?

By JUNE WILSON

Another puzzle is how a woman can tell when the disembodied voice on the phone saying, "It's a personal matter," is for real and when it is actually a total stranger trying to get to the boss with an insurance pitch.

Men do not know how a woman can tell the difference between a quiet child and a quiet-child-up-to-something. Or how she's sure the Harrisons and the Johnsons, who have never met, won't like each other and cannot be invited to the same small party.

Men are open-mouthed with wonder at how any woman unfallingly knows when a couple is not getting along though all is happy on the surface. And a man doesn't know why, when he remarks that you have on a pretty dress, you always reply with the question, "Do you REALLY like it?"

The final mystery, perhaps, is when he was only teasing and you had to know it was all in fun, why are you suddenly sensitive, hurt, wounded, cut, bleeding... even in tears?

Your man may give some of these answers to that question if you ask him. The reason they are printed here is just in case you, too, like the sound of your own voice and have been dying for the chance to explain all this to him!

Paper Tennis Dresses Guaranteed 1 Game

WIMBLEDON, England — The newest thing in tennis clothes is the paper dress.

Wimbledon had not seen such a stir about sports apparel since "gorgeous Gussie" Moran.

The paper dresses are trimmed with colored ribbons. Designer is Teddy Tinling, who has designed for international tennis stars since the days of "gorgeous Gussie."

He was perturbed when asked if the paper dresses could take the heavy strain of championship play.

"This has come up before," he snapped. "We guarantee them for one match. The chances are they will stand for four or five."

Drive-In Calls for Service!

By YOLANDE GWIN

Dear Yolande: In attending a drive-in movie do you think it is right for my boy friend to leave me in the car and go get us some sandwiches and drinks? Don't you think he should take me too?

No, silly, I don't. If he offers to wait on you, let him. This variety is hard to find. He could be the type to ask you to get the sandwiches so he wouldn't miss any of the movie. Ever thought of that?

Dear Yolande: Should wedding invitations be addressed to the entire family?

If you mean Mr. and Mrs. James Jones and family the answer is no. The "family" which would mean sons and daughters should be sent individual invitations.

Dear Yolande: Is it good taste to have invitations to golden wedding anniversary receptions engraved in gold?

On with the gold rush, friend. It's a once-in-a-lifetime event.

Dear Yolande: I have a man friend ill in the hospital. We are both unmarried, so I don't know the proper thing to do. Should I go to see him or send him something?

You are a lousy friend if you don't do both. Forget about the "single" silliness. You date him don't you?

RICH'S

Wife Bars Ship's Chef From Galley

LONDON (WNS). — The chef who runs the kitchens aboard the Queen Elizabeth is not permitted in his own kitchen at home.

"He may cook in 11 languages when he's at sea, but at home he gets my steak-and-kidney pie and loves it," said Mrs. William Ransom.

"Never let your husband in the kitchen under any circumstances," the big bubbling middle-aged Englishwoman advises brides who are setting up housekeeping after the honeymoon.

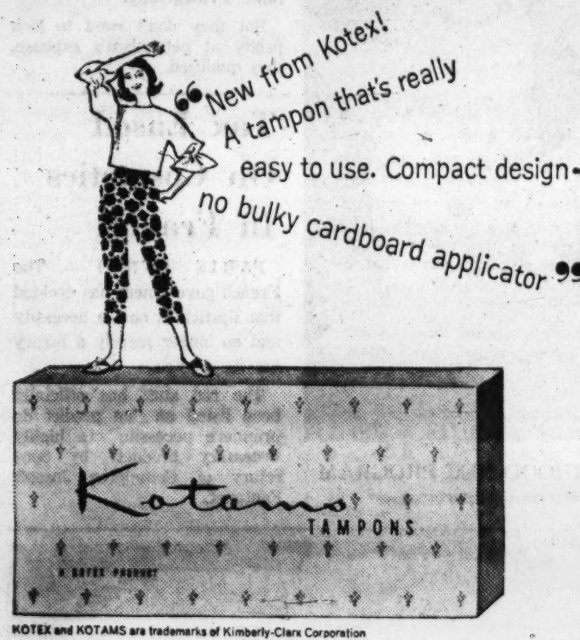

A man in the kitchen makes a mess of everything, develops a martyr complex, loses his appetite, treats his wife like an office assistant and forgets his manners.

HERE ARE FIRST TWO STEPS TO INSTANT FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

Instant Arrangements Will Stun the Experts!

By YOLANDE GWIN

from another and would like to create some instant arrangements, here's your chance.

Some experts are giving the lowdown on basic arrangements because it seems that flower arrangements reflect your character. Thus, flowers arranged by the thoughtless appear to be without feeling while those prepared by the calm and considerate brim over with good will. If you want your character smeared you want it to be from juicy scandal instead of cutting the stem of a chrysanthemum the wrong length! Just think what future generations will say about you! The thought is terrible.

These arrangements are very effective, yet simple, practical and easy to learn.

FORM OR COLOR

"You look for form more than color and if people only knew it they could just wander into their yard and get all the necessary materials," she said during the weekend at her home on Arden road. "Just pick a piece of nature just as it grows for its line and beauty are combined. You can catch a moment of arrested growth in the life of a living plant which is ideal in its perfection."

"The first thing to consider is your container. Select one with an eye toward the material you will use and the space and the room where it will be used. It might be interesting to note here that an Oriental arrangement is impossible for a dining room table because there is a front and a back to the materials used."

In creating an Oriental arrangement one must select the most perfect blossom and bud for the main line. It should be cut two and a half times the height of a tall vase or one and a half times the length of a rectangular container. This is called the heaven line, and is placed at the center back of the needlepoint holder.

The next piece of material is cut a little lower and is placed on the holder back and to one side of the heaven. This is called the mountain and gives a third dimensional quality.

Now for the third stem which is called man. It is cut two thirds of the height of the tallest heaven line and placed on the holder to the front right or left of the tallest flower.

THEY'RE ADMIRING

"In my arrangement I used crabapples for my heaven and man line," said Mrs. Morris. "The earth was nejmie funkia and the container was a usubata. The simplicity of an Oriental arrangement sometimes throws you but the results are always very rewarding and beautiful and I must say admired."

It is quite appropriate to mention here something of the etiquette of admiring a Japanese flower arrangement.

Good taste requires that a guest upon entering the Japanese home admires the flower arrangement which has been made by the hostess for his or her enjoyment. This is the proper way to proceed.

Approach to within three feet of the tokonoma (that's the alcove where the arrangement is placed) look first at the dominant stem, then at the secondary stem and finally at the third stem. After viewing the arrangement, study the container or vase. This custom of admiring arrangements and commenting favorably on them is good.

Keep this in mind in case you are in the land of the rising sun, and pretend the arrangement is pretty whether it is or not. There is nothing like putting on a good act.

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of easy steps to basic flower arrangements of varying styles.

Have Care For Your Hair, Lady

Have a care for your hair. The hair is particularly vulnerable to the sun, wind and water. That means that your hair doesn't look forward with enthusiasm to all the fun you'll be having the summer vacation season. Give your hair a break. Cover it whenever possible with hat or scarf. Wear a bathing cap when swimming and dry the hair with a towel immediately after each dip. Shampoo often, being especially careful to rinse thoroughly.

Tips Help You Select Flatware

The woman who wants flatware "to have and to hold" should consider how easy it is to hold and use.

That's the advice of Robbie Blakemore University of Illinois home economist. She judges the permanent value of flatware by its functionalism: how well the knife cuts, the fork skewers and the spoon stirs and scoops.

Check flatware for weight and balance, too, Miss Blakemore counsels. "The pieces should not seem unduly heavy in any one part," she said. "And they should be easy to hold and use."

Thinking Man's Golfer

OLYMPIA FIELDS, Ill.—“Daddy, why is everybody watching Jerry Barber today?” inquired a little boy as the PGA playoff got under way Monday. “Doesn't anyone want to see Arnold Palmer?”

Of course Barber and Don January were the only holdovers from an original cast of 167 professional golfers. Palmer and his playmates had departed and now Barber and January were co-stars on the fifth day and final 18 at picturesque Olympia Fields.

Outlar

Barber had set the stage for the stirring showdown with an electrifying 50-foot putt as darkness closed in Sunday night. That super stroke, on the heels of 30- and 40-foot putts on the previous two holes, had erased January's four-stroke lead after 15 holes.

As it turned out Monday afternoon, Barber was the man to watch. The 45-year-old veteran parred No. 18, January bogied, and that lone stroke was the margin separating the champion and contender after 90 holes.

A magic putter paved Barber's path to the biggest triumph of his golfing life. Over the 90-hole grind, the smallest man in the tourney did not three-putt a single green.

Barber, oldest man ever to win a PGA, Masters or National Open crown, is the thinking man's golfer. He weighs only 135 pounds, but he offsets the lack of youth and brawn with brains.

“How far was your three-iron shot out of the bunker on No. 18?” inquired someone during the press session, referring to the shot that won the tourney.

A man said about 175 yards. Barber reached into his hip pocket, took out a little book and said, “I'll tell exactly. It was 183 feet.”

How did Barber know? He spends more time studying a course before a tourney than some players devote to practice. He had stepped off the exact distance to that bunker before the meet and the information was filed in his course index.

—Eldest Champion Still An Eagle Student

“I don't have depth perception,” Barber explained. “I can't see, so I have to know these things. I'm also color blind.”

“A lot of players use the course index now,” Barber continued and laughed. “I think they're emulating me. So I'll tell you how I got the idea. There's an amateur golfer named Gene Andrews in Los Angeles who has a card index on every course in the country. I'm playing with him one day and he has me down several bucks before I know what's happening. Figure he must know something about that course that I didn't. So that's when I started using the book.”

Barber probably practices more than any pro on tour, and his amazing putting proves that practice makes perfect. He also attributes success on the greens to a heavy putter, explaining that most golfers use a blade too light.

The affable new PGA champ pointed out that he was swinging a weed cutter, chopping with a hoe and milking cows long before he saw his first golf course. He grew up on a farm near Jacksonville, Ill. Golf brought the boy to the city, however, for he followed two older caddy brothers to the course.

“We watched the water holes, and we'd retrieve balls for the players, that was my start in golf,” Barber explained. “But I had always been interested in golf. When Bob Jones made the Grand Slam, he was my hero. I was 14 then and I knew that I wanted to be a golfer.”

“My brothers and I would slip on the course in Jacksonville and play three holes when the superintendent wasn't looking. That was the first golf I played.”

“I've been a pro now for 21 years (on the tour since 1950), but I've played a lot of golf as an amateur,” Barber continued.

—He Practiced Putting Under Street Lights

“I used to work in Florida in the winter as a hotel desk clerk at night so I could play golf in the daytime. I'd sleep in the mornings and play in the afternoons.”

“That was down in Clearwater. I'd play golf until dark, then I'd practice putting under the street light. That's how bad I wanted to be a golfer. I always took this game seriously.”

You'd assume that one of the longest tourneys in PGA annals would whip the smallest competitor physically. Did the 36 holes exhaust Barber Sunday?

“It was real hot and I've never consumed so much liquid,” said Barber. He doesn't smoke and he's a teetotaler, but he goes for the soda pop. “I just hope my purse will take care of the Coke bill. I was real tired when we finished, but I'm not tired now. Would any of you fellows like to play nine holes right now?”

There were no volunteers from the press corps.

Barber then noted that winning the PGA meant a lot of things to him other than the $11,000 check. “Permanent invitation to the Masters,” he said, “and that's wonderful. A Ryder Cup berth, permanent invitation to the PGA, not having to qualify for the Open. It means a lot to me.”

As a result of his brilliant PGA performance, Barber received an invitation to go to England for a TV golf exhibition. He'll then return to the Wilshire Country Club in Los Angeles where he is serving his seventh term as pro.

“They've been real nice to me at Wilshire,” he said. “So I'm going to stay there for a while. My tourney schedule is uncertain right now.”

And they have a nice guy to be nice to, a golfer who practices what he teaches. The new PGA champion is a thorough student of the game, truly the thinking man's golfer.

Norris, Marinacci Bash HRs, But Crackers Crumble, 8-6

By F. M. WILLIAMS

Special to The Constitution

NASHVILLE—Despite home runs by Gene Marinacci and Al Norris and a tinging ninth-inning rally, the Atlanta Crackers dropped an 8-6 decision to the Nashville Vols here Monday night.

The loss brought to an end one of the season's toughest road trips for the Crackers, who dropped six of eight here and in Chattanooga. This was their third defeat here.

Marinacci and Norris hit their homers with the sacks empty in the fourth and fifth innings. By the time they came, the Vols had assumed a commanding lead, and ironically, it was Nashville's pitcher who provided the big offensive blow.

Little Glen Crable, picking up his seventh win in 10 decisions, unloaded a three-run triple in the third inning, when the Vols scored four times off starter and loser Ed Dick, now 5-5 on the year.

Rod Kanehl had already driven one run across to break a 1-1 tie, when Crable's high fly hit the short right-field boards, just a few yards inside the foul line. Two were out at the time.

The Vols picked up two more in the fourth on a walk to Chuck Staniland, Joe Christian's triple, and a single by Kanehl. After that Dick went to the showers for a pinch hitter, being replaced by Larry Williams.

Williams gave up an unearned run in the sixth, then was also lifted for a pinch hitter and Jack Smith worked the final frame.

Atlanta's defense, shaky throughout the series here,

JANUARY BOGEYS 18, LOSES BY STROKE

Barber's 67 Wins Tense PGA Playoff

By JESSE OUTLAR

OLYMPIA FIELDS, Ill.—Lightweight Jerry Barber, who battled Don January on even terms for 89 gruelling holes, struck the knockout punch with a three iron here Monday to become the smallest and oldest champion in 43 PGA title bouts.

The 45-year-old Barber, who packs 135 pounds on a 5-6 frame, brought the pulsating playoff to a close with a fabulous approach shot out of a bunker 183 yards away. Barber planted this three-iron haymaker 25 feet from the pin and two-putted for a 67.

January, also in a bunker off the tee, landed in another with his approach. He bailed out only 12 feet from the pin and missed his chance to tie when his putt was some three inches shy of the cup and a score of 68.

Barber, who promoted the playoff by erasing a four-stroke deficit with putts of 20, 40 and 50 feet on the final three holes Sunday, had to stage another comeback to claim the crown.

Barber cashed the first of four birdies on the very first hole to take a one-stroke advantage, but January retaliated with a bird on No. 2. When Barber was confronted with his lone bogey on No. 4, January birdied and zoomed out front.

The tenacious Barber didn't overhaul the lean Texas sharpshooter from Dallas until the 14th hole. Barber started dealing himself a winning hand when he birdied par 4, No. 12, repeated on 14 and winged ahead with a birdie 3 on 15.

But these two gents had been too close together to be separated now, and January plunked in a 12-footer on the 16th to snarl the score for the umpteenth time. Under intense pressure, both men parred 17, a hole in which January stroked in a chips-down 15-footer.

Thus, after 89 holes and five days—rain washed one day off the boards—Barber and January were deadlocked a hole away from a possible sudden death showdown.

The tension which had mounted daily was now at a peak. All the chips were riding on one hole. The winner would collect $11,000 of the record $60,000

Miller, Pascual Duel As All-Stars Tie, 1-1

Rain Kayoes Star Clash

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—Stu Miller of the San Francisco Giants and Camilo Pascual of the Minnesota Twins were locked in a 1-1 strike-out battle when rain brought an end to Monday's second 1961 All-Star Game after nine innings.

It will go into the record books as a tie. There will be no replay.

Miller, National League's winning pitcher of a 5-4 battle in 10 innings at windy Candlestick Park, San Francisco, July 11, struck out five of the 10 men he faced in a brilliant one-hit three-inning chore. Pascual fanned four in his three hitless innings and walked only one man.

None of the 30 previous All-Star contests had ended in a tie although the 1952 game in Philadelphia was rained out after five innings with the National a 3-2 winner.

The game started in bright sunshine in 70-degree weather but dark clouds rolled over Fenway Park in the middle innings and the lights were turned on at the start of the seventh. It started to rain in the eighth, forcing the box seat customers of the crowd of 31,851, paying a net $172,298.19, to rush for cover.

For a long time it appeared that a first inning home run by Detroit's Rocky Colavito off Cincinnati's Bob Purkey would be the ball game. Rocky's drive, his second in All-Star play, soared about 340 feet atop the "chummy left field wall."

Starter Jim Bunning of Detroit, who had worked seven and a fraction innings Saturday, hurled three perfect innings and left with a 1-0 lead.

Don Schwall, Boston's amazing rookie who has compiled an 11-2 record since his recall from Seattle in late May, scrambled out of dangerous situations in the fourth and fifth before the Nationals finally broke through for the tying run in the sixth.

Hank Aaron of the Milwaukee Braves grounded out, opening the sixth, but Schwall walked Milwaukee's Ed Mathews. The 23-year-old right-hander steadied and got Willie Mays of San Francisco on a fly ball to right but hit the Giants Orlando Cepeda on the shoulder with a pitch.

Eddie Kasko of Cincinnati bounced a slow roller to shortstop Luis Aparicio of Chicago who held the ball, unable, to make a play

One All-Star Tiff Enough—Richards

From Press Dispatches

Paul Richards, manager of the American League All-Stars this season, strongly urged Monday that the second baseball game against the National League be discontinued.

“One All-Star game is a great spectacle, another is anti-climatic,” Richards was quoted as saying by the Baltimore Evening Sun.

“In playing two games, we're putting the dollar sign on something baseball has paid dearly to get—the confidence of the people. And that's not good.”

Buckhead annihilated Americus, 9-0, and Henry County edged the Rome-Atlanta All-Stars Monday night, 5-4, in the first round of the State Pony League tournament at Chastain Park.

In the first game, Buddy Copeland hurled a neat one-hitter while walking only two and striking out 10 to completely baffle the Americus nine.

Winning pitcher Robert Eskew was apparently breezing along toward a 5-1 win when Rome suddenly erupted for a seventh inning rally that threatened the security of this young right-hander. However, just as calmly as Eskew had begun the inning, he proceeded to fan the third and fourth men in the batting order to notch the victory.

Mike Pittard clouted a homer with Barney Klein aboard in the third and Bill Thurman had a two-run homer in the fifth to lead the way for victorious Buckhead.

Autry Wilkerson led the Henry County hitters with two for three, including a double. Eskew and Dick Hodges came through with clutch hits to drive in big runs.

Yankees' Offensive Punch Built Around Davis' Speed

Pritchett Opens
At Quarterback

By PAUL ATKINSON

It's this simple: For the North High School All-Stars to win Thursday night, halfback Jeff Davis must be sprung loose.

The swift 6-0, 185-pound Jefferson fellow showed Monday why he's man the North must bank on. Consistently he zipped around the flanks to score touchdowns in a brilliant individual display.

"He's our most underrated player," said North coach Charles Grisham. "By that I mean he came from a Class B school and most people have more or less overlooked him. But he can go."

Grisham settled on an offensive lineup, and three-fourths of his backfield is composed of players who graduated from the smaller schools, Class A and down.

Only Avondale High School quarterback Ed Pritchett breaks the little school monopoly. The halfbacks will be Davis and slippery little Johnny Grisham of Washington-Wilkes. At fullback, Grisham will use his own angular, 195-pound smasher, Howard (The Jet) Nixon.

His line will have Pat Sanders of Forest Park and Southwest's Tommy Lewis at ends, Marist's Jim Carroll and Russell's Bill Joluck at tackles, Grady's Jerry Davis and Rossville's Tommy Green at guards and Southwest's Steve Slay at center.

There will be only selective platooning by Grisham. Likely, Murphy's Jimmy Hobson, a 225-pounder, will replace Joluck at tackle and Athens' Pete Dickens moves in for Grisham in the secondary.

Across the lot, South coach Earl O'Neal had his offensive lineup scrimmage vigorously with the defense. In the offense, he had Waycross' Darrell Page at quarterback, Savannah's Billy Joe James at fullback, Bainbridge's Fred Barber and Ed Varner and Richmond's Grady Luckey at the halfbacks.

Up front, it was Lanier's Bunny Richardson and Waycross' Leslie Hanley at the ends, Moultrie's Vann Ellis and Cairo's Dennis Murphy at tackles, Blakely-Union's Frank Pickle and Valdosta's Jimmy Adams at guards and Bainbridge's Gary Clift at center.

The defenders were ends Billy Blocker (Valdosta) and Wade Gray (Richmond), tackles Jimmy Guy (Waycross) and Jimmy Turner (Ware Co.), guards Jimmy Carroll (Richmond) and Jimmy Seward (Lanier) and deep men Tommy Tart and Allen Holt (Valdosta), Dan Reeves (Americus), Franklin Banks and Gene Goldman (Lincolnton), Buddy Robinson (Richmond).

NOTEBOOKING: South is missing guard Melton Callahan (Waycross), who is out of the game with a back injury. North hospital list is headed still by Newman tackle Bubba Shell, a doubtful participant. Sanders has a bruised shoulder, but was practicing in the afternoon session. Jeff Davis and Jon Kilgore (North Fulton) will do the punting for North. Davis is more consistent, but Kilgore can boom 'em further. Joluck and Dickens do the place-kicking. Coaches pouring in for the GACA clinic, which opens Tuesday at the Biltmore Hotel. How about this one? Dublin's Ben Snipes, though signed to a Georgia grant-in-aid, admits his ambition is to play professional baseball.

Fourth Quarter Play to Decide All-Star Cage Tilt, Says Jones

By PAUL ATKINSON

"This game," said North coach T. P. Jones, "will be decided in the fourth quarter."

He was referring to the North-South High School All-Star basketball game at Alexander Memorial Coliseum Wednesday night. It's the first of a two-pronged attraction cosponsored by The Journal and GHSA.

"The weather is sure to be hot," continued Jones. "No doubt about it, the South has more speed than we do. And most people are saying we have so much height—but take away 6-7 Freddie Guy and 6-7 Lee DeFore and we are pretty even in height."

"I'm satisfied with our conditioning program. The boys have worked hard and they still have good spirit."

"What are our strong points? Rebounding for one with Guy and Virlyn Gaynes: shooting with Jimmy Pitts."

Jones and his assistant, Newton County's Ron Bradley, likely will open with DeFore (Sylvan) and Gaynes (Sylvan) at forwards, Guy (Avondale) at center and a back court of Jimmy Robinson (Headland) and Pitts (Smyrna). Newton County's Bob Mitchell, Sylvan's Tommy Roberts and Newman's Billy Parker are the first-line reserves.

"We'll play everyone," Jones assured. "With a 40-minute game, we'll have much opportunity to substitute."

McCARTHY, BANQUET OPEN GACA SLATE

Induction of six new members of the Georgia Prep Sports Hall of Fame and opening sessions of the Georgia Athletic Coaches Association clinic featuring Mississippi State's Babe McCarthy are docketed Tuesday.

Marse Joe Pittard, himself a member of the sports hall, will be principal speaker at the banquet at 7 p.m. at the Biltmore. Inducted will be LaGrange coach Oliver Hunnicutt, George Gardner, Thomas Green Jr., Tommy Paris Sr., Kinsey Stewart and Dr. Alfred Scott.

McCarthy will lecture on championship basketball at two sessions, 10 and 11:05 a.m. at the Biltmore. In the afternoon, Auburn wrestling coach Swede Umbach, Georgia Tech gymnastic coach Lyle Welsch, and Tech swimming coach Fred Lanoue will handle their specialties at 1:15, 2:30 and 3 p.m. at the old Tech gym.—ATKINSON ball up, then dropped it and got an error that eventually cost him three runs.

Crabbe went all the way, though he was in a bad jam in the ninth after a single by Al Ferrara and two walks loaded the bases with none out.

A long fly by Don LeJohn got one run in, then Mike Brumley grounded out to move men to second and third. Jim Williams bounced a single through the middle to score them, but Larry Burright grounded to short to end the game.

Crabbe also had a bad beginning. The Crackers got to him for a run on singles by Burright, Pochie Hartsfield and Ferrara for a run in the opening frame.

A crowd of 663 saw the game. That brought attendance for the three-day, four-game series to 2,646.

The Crackers return home to Ponce de Leon Park Tuesday night to meet Shreveport in a 6 o'clock doubleheader.

RATTLERS' JAKE GAITHER (L) EXPLAINS FOOTBALL PLAY TO AUDIENCE
With Him at Clinic Here is Ed Oglesby of His Florida A&M Staff

'Weak Schedule' Charges Amusing to Rattlers' Gaither

A&M Will Play
Anyone: Jake

By AL THOMY

Jake Gaither of Florida A&M, the winningest college football coach in the country, Monday answered critics who claim he plays in a "weak league."

The whole thing started last year when a former Grambling fullback, here for the 100 Per Cent Wrong Club party, said A&M would not have compiled a fantastic 120-20-4 record under Gaither if the Rattlers had competed in the strong Southwest Negro Conference.

"There's no doubt about it, the Southwest Conference is a better balanced league," answered the personable Gaither, here to lecture at the fourth annual Georgia Interscholastic Association coaches clinic. "But—we play the top three teams in that league every year, usually Southern University, Texas Southern and Prairie View."

"We have tried, but haven't been able to get a game with Grambling."

"So that statement is half true. The Southwest is a stronger, better balanced league... but we do play the top teams in that area every year."

Gaither said if others were agreeable, he would like to see a super conference of nine Negro schools picked from the four major conferences in the land.

"That idea does raise a geographical problem, however," he admitted.

Gaither's record proves he does not dodge the strong teams. As host coach of the annual Orange Blossom post-season classic at Miami, he has consistently helped select the strongest opponent for his Rattlers. He might have done the job too well for overwhelming success. Fact is, Florida A&M has won 14, lost 13 in 27 Blossom games.

Out of 17 schools in the Southern league, only five will play the Rattlers, so Gaither obviously has somewhat of a scheduling problem.

The headman of the Rattlers, who has sent five players to the National Football League ("and I have six this year ready to go"), believes the wide-open, pro-type offense will take over the college football this fall.

"You'll see more scoring, more downfield blocking, less gang-tackling and more passing," he said. "This, of course, will be more attractive for the spectators. Lines—will be split and flankers and slot men used more than ever. Coaches are now utilizing the width of the field instead of bunching in close for their offense, forcing opponents into man-to-man coverage.

"You won't see many full house backfields, that is, four backs behind the center at the same time. Usually, there will be two, with others on flanks or in the slot."

Gaither attributes the phenomenal success of the Rattlers to (1) a winning tradition, (2) hard work on part of coaches and players and (3) tremendous school spirit.

worked hard and they still have good spirit.

"What are our strong points? Rebounding for one with Guy and Virlyn Gaynes: shooting with Jimmy Pitts."

Jones and his assistant, Newton County's Ron Bradley, likely will open with DeFore (Sylvan) and Gaynes (Sylvan) at forwards, Guy (Avondale) at center and a back court of Jimmy Robinson (Headland) and Pitts (Smyrna). Newton County's Bob Mitchell, Sylvan's Tommy Roberts and Newman's Billy Parker are the first-line reserves.

"We'll play everyone," Jones assured. "With a 40-minute game, we'll have much opportunity to substitute."

RULES OF ROAD IN BOATING MAY SAVE YOUR LIFE

By CHARLES ELLIOTT
Constitution Outdoor Columnist

Harry Gillam, who lives up Tennessee way, and does chores for the Volunteer State Game and Fish Commission, is alarmed over the number of drownings in his state, and the rate at which they are increasing each season. What concerns him most is that no one seems to be doing anything about it.

What he has to say may be of some value to you or me if it saves our life—though there might be a question in some quarters of just how much value. Certainly his comments are applicable everywhere, in this land of ours which each year grows a new crop of lakes and ponds, and along with them a tremendously increasing army of boaters.

Charles Elliott

Gillam says: "A perfect situation was created near Nashville this Fourth of July. Next to Old Hickory Dam is a park area posted with signs shouting DANGER! SWIM AT YOUR OWN RISK. HAZARDOUS BOTTOM. NO LIFE GUARD ON DUTY. So naturally with a challenge like this, 15,000 Davidson County folks turned out to try their luck at getting drowned. None did, but the law of averages says that next year they will, for this is an open invitation to disaster."

What he says about Tennessee reasonably well fits our own pattern: "We're still a state of landlubbers, but we're trying to put a big navy afloat every weekend"—without the slightest preparation for it in many cases, and without even any forethought of the risk and dangers involved. Some of us know how to pull the starter handle to get the motor going and that is about as far as our seamanship extends.

Whether you are ready to launch your newly acquired boat, or simply plan to go along with a friend to help put his craft in operation, what preparations have you made to stay alive? That is a rather brutal question, but if you think about it, it might save some poor guy the long and wearisome job of dragging the lake for your body. It is not necessary, of course, to graduate from Annapolis before you take your first rowboat ride, but you may condition yourself for the event by remembering a few simple facts.

Don't be one of those riding in an overloaded boat. Every craft has a load limit, and any excess beyond that is simply asking for trouble.

It is not sissy, undignified or a reflection in any way on your courage, to wear a life jacket. And be certain there is a jacket or preserver-cushion for everyone in the boat.

A boat is not any place for horseplay, as splashing water on a companion, standing on the bow, or trying to scare the daylight out of your favorite girl friend by rocking the craft.

Sit down and stay there while the boat is in motion. If you want to change seats in a small boat, go ashore and start out again.

These are only a few basic fundamentals, but they are responsible for a good percentage of the toll of human lives by the watery route each year.

Almost any experienced boatman can tell you the simple "rules of the road," in which are wrapped up the safe and courteous operation of any craft. Whether you are an operator or passenger, you'll be more confident if you know what they are.

Remember that you are not a fish, have no gills for separating the oxygen from water, and that the third time you go down for keeps, you'll be a long time drowned.

Miller, Pascual Hurl All-Stars to Tie

Bill White of St. Louis, who doubled in the fifth, slammed a sharp bouncer between Schwall's legs. Aparicio dashed to his left, fielding the ball on the first base side of second base but couldn't make a play while Mathews raced home with the trying run. That ended the day's scoring.

The umpires waited for about 25 minutes while the rain poured down. After a consultation with Commissioner Ford Frick the game finally was called. It goes into the record books as a tie game, leaving the American League with a 16-14 edge and this the only tie in the 31-game series.

Manager Paul Richards of the American used only three pitchers, Bunning, Schwall and Pascual. Donnie Murtaugh, the National League manager from Pittsburgh, used four pitchers, following Purkey with Philadelphia's Art Mahaffey and Los Angeles' Sandy Koufax before he got to Miller.

Miller, who throws three pitches—slow, slower and slowest—had the American League sluggers swinging vainly from their heels. He allowed only one hit, a scratch infield single by Detroit's Al Kaline opening the ninth.

Then came the real dramatics as the rain soaked the field. Miller's grey uniform was soggy with moisture as he faced his biggest threat of the afternoon.

Kaline had opened the inning with a single past Milwaukee's Frank Bolling. Up came Mickey Mantle, the New York Yankees' feared home run slugger who was hitless and had struck out in the sixth. Mantle took the count to 2-2 and finally went down swinging as boos echoed to the far reaches of Fenway.

While Elston Howard of the Yankees was batting, Kaline stole second, sliding under Los Angeles' Johnny Roseboro's perfect throw to Bolling. But Howard also whiffed.

With the potential winning run perched on second base, Richards called for Roy Sievers of Chicago, a home run hitter, to bat for Aparicio.

Miller worked ever so carefully on Sievers. First a ball, then a called strike. Next was a strike swinging. Two more balls put the count to 3-2 before the slender giant slipped a third strike past Sievers' swinging bat.

Miller struck out Aparicio and Cleveland's Johnny Temple in the seventh before striking out the side in the ninth.

Little Stu must wonder which side the weatherman is on. In San Francisco the wind blew so hard it actually tipped him off the hill for a balk. In Boston he had to overcome the rain.

ty in keeping the payees separated from the players.

January was first off the tee and first in the bunker on the left. Barber followed suit and drove into the bunker on the right. Barber then put the heat on January with his magnificent 183-yard three-iron approach from sand to green. January's second shot was from bunker to bunker.

But the cool Texan refused to be counted out just then and blasted out only 12 feet from the pin. Barber missed from 25 feet. Barber tapped in the winning putt of about four feet. Thus, at the end of 90 holes, only the three inches by which January missed his putt separated the winner and the contender. The final par gave Barber a three-under 67, and the bogey left January with a 68.

In a masterful exhibition of chipping and putting, each player required only 27 putts on the 18-hole tour. January had five birdies, one bogey and a killing double bogey 6 on No. 7. Barber fired four birdies, only one bogey.

Barber unreeled rounds of 69, 67, 71, 70 and 67 en route to the title. January was neck and neck with scores of 72, 66, 67, 72, 68. Barber's 90-hole total of 344 was six under par. January was of course five under. And they were the only two men in the vast field on 167 to fracture par on this old, tough and beautiful course.

Now in his 21st year as a pro, Barber did not spend a complete year on tour until 1950. The PGA triumph was his second of the year—he won the Azalea in a playoff in April—and the fifth of his career.

Barber earned almost $3,000 more in five days here than he had made in the previous six months. And the little man deserved the biggest prize of his uphill career, for he won the 43rd PGA the hard way.

Sterling Wins Y Marathon, Tops 12 Miles

Seventeen-year-old David Sterling won top honors in the YMCA swimming marathon for the month of July with a total distance of 12½ miles.

Second place went to another 17-year-old, Dennis Oxford, who swam 11 miles during the month. Sterling is a member of the North Fulton Swim Team while Oxford hails from Marietta.

Dr. Bennett Garner, who's 55 years old, finished third, swimming six miles.

When Fish Just Won't Bite, Secret Is To Bite The Fish

By TOM STODDARD
Constitution Sports Writer

MAGNOLIA SPRINGS, Ala.—It gets extremely hot in south Alabama in late July, so hot, in fact, that most sensible fish decline to bite at all.

Therefore, fishermen who wish to score are forced to bite the fish.

Not exactly, you understand. The phrase was coined when some persons unfamiliar with the habits of the natives, observed that the mullet must be biting pretty good.

Tom Stoddard

They were told to the contrary, it was the fishermen which were biting the mullet, using treble gang hooks, casting reels and a good part of the lazy afternoon.

Mullet never bite, at least almost never. They just wander around in schools, feeding on the various bits of grass and seaweed that float near the surface. Sometimes, in the spring, they have been caught on worms by fishermen with more patience than average.

The less patient take their sport where they find it, locating a well-known spot of mullet concentration, casting over the fish that are visible in the semi-clear water and souging the gang-hooks into individual fish with hefty jerks.

It is nowhere near as easy as it is simple. In the first place, the mullet soon become initiated, and spook at the slightest bit of action, either in the air above them or in the water. It is thought that various experiences with the plentiful gar that live in the Magnolia River add to their caution.

At any rate, it's anything but easy to time the cast and the jerk at a fish that slips into high gear at a hint of danger. Those that have mastered it are not many, and the knowledge of the sport has not spread over any great distance.

For instance, a friend of ours whom we shall call John, was testing his skill off the only bridge that crosses the river a couple of years ago, and had two mullet lying in the sand (which is everywhere) at his feet.

He was then approached by the game warden, one Homer, who inquired after his fishing license. John had none, so did one fish under each foot and protested that he had not been fishing at all.

"Well," mused Homer, "I oughta run in, since I can see you got a rod and reel, but I know you ain't gonna catch anything with a hook like that, anyways."

MRS. BETTE SOMERVILLE WITH GIANT MARLIN
Husband Ted (R) Aided in 45-Minute Struggle

Records Run in Family

By ROD SPICER

Maybe it runs in the family but Mr. and Mrs. Ted Somerville are either Atlanta's luckiest sportsmen or most skilled.

With other hunters and fishermen trying to "wish" their catches into trophy size the Somervilles are trying to find a place big enough to house their souvenirs.

Most recent "problem" is a 186-pound nine-foot blue marlin hooked off the coast of Acapulco by Mrs. Somerville. The fish, caught on her first deep-sea fishing trip, was reported as the largest of its type caught during the summer. "Marlin run much bigger, however, with the best fishing time in the early spring," said Mrs. Somerville.

"I'll admit I was excited but it really wasn't too big. I leave the record-making to my husband."

The record, and other problem is an 1,100-pound elk bagged by Somerville last fall. The elk, which was too large to mount on the wall of Somerville's Elk's Club, is the subject of a feature article to appear in Outdoor Life Magazine.

But the Somervilles aren't content to rest on their laurels. "Ted and the author of the magazine piece, (Archery editor) Howard Gillelan of Outdoor Life) are planning a trip to Newfoundland in the fall to hunt moose with a bow and arrow," said the Mrs.

Would she go along? "O I don't know. He's the hunter. Maybe I'll go back and catch me a big fish."

The bidding:

Pass 4 ♥ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♦

Today, we present a case in which a desperation lead combined with an unorthodox bid to provide declarer with the clues required to land an almost hopeless game contract.

When East failed to keep his partner's diamond bid alive it was naturally up to South to act. The conventional procedure with this holding is to make a take-out double.

It was a moral certainty in view of the opening bid that if North and South were to score game it could be only in hearts. If South made the orthodox double North might respond in the major suit and then the king of diamonds would come down in dummy and be attacked in the opening lead.

South therefore decided to bid one heart. West rebid despite partner's pass and North offered a raise. East and South continued the competition but North's final raise to game was overly ambitious.

West opened the ace of diamonds and continued with the queen, putting declarer in with the king. The first problem was the play of the trumps. Holding nine of the suit, the normal procedure is to play for the drop but South made an interesting deduction at trick one.

The lead of the ace of diamonds marked East with the king of spades despite his pass for, if West had held the ace and king of spades he would hardly have been up against the extremity of having to lead from the ace-queen of diamonds.

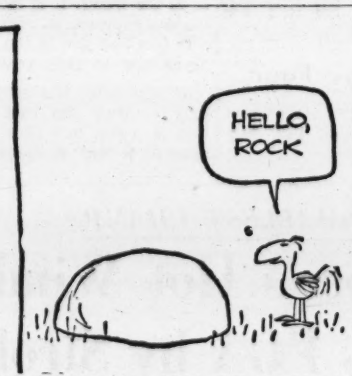

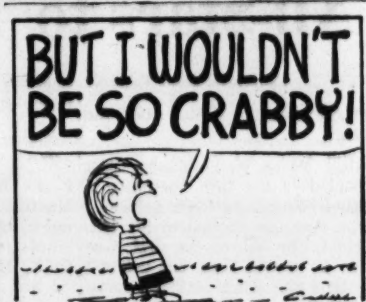

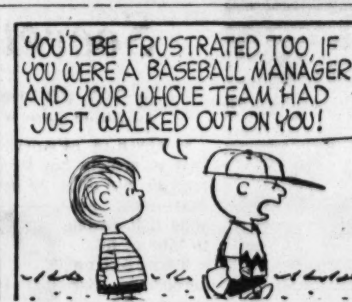

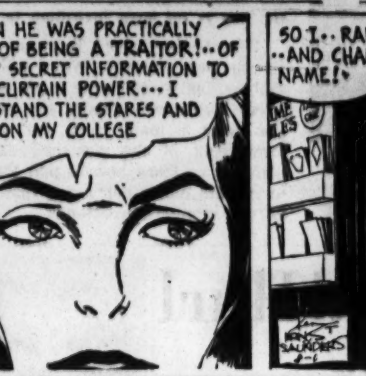

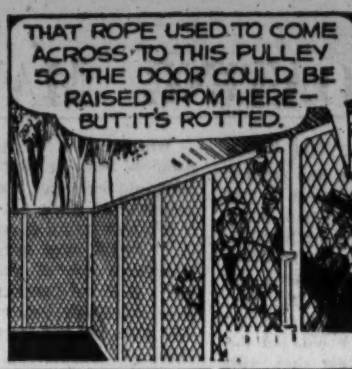

Since East is known to have the king of spades, it is hardly likely that he will also show up with the queen of hearts since with that honor holding he would probably have kept the bidding open.

Declarer therefore cashed the king of hearts, followed with the three and, when West played low, South put in the ten from the dummy. After mopping up the trumps, declarer refused the club finesse, dropping the blank king of clubs with his ace on the same line of reasoning that induced him to finesse in trumps. Two spades were discarded from dummy on the long clubs, permitting South to score an overtrick.

Cotton Mixed, Trade Quiet

NEW YORK (U)—Cotton futures closed 15 cents a bale higher to 60 cents lower.

Trading was quiet, featured by spot market transferring of October and December contracts to deferred deliveries. Commission houses also bought. Hedge sales were light.

The 60 cents a bale decline represented a bid price for the inactive 1962 December delivery.

Weather over major portions of the cotton belt was generally clear and favorable but private reports from Texas and Oklahoma noted this type weather will be needed for some time to come. Recent heavy rains in these two states have caused some damage to the crop and promoted excessive growth of grass and weeds. Insect activity has increased and the wet weather has made it difficult to curb the pests.

Training Held Key To Worker Survival

By ACHSAH POSEY

"In tomorrow's automated world only the skilled will find the path smooth," Brunswick A. Bagdon told the Atlanta Rotary Club Monday.

"To meet the demands of this kind of economy our young people will have to study, be trained and ready. But will we be ready?"

Speaking on the effects of automation on our economy, Bagdon emphasized that the overall benefit was greater than the adverse effects.

"But there are many jobs, business and even communities" being made obsolete or unnecessary by technical progress, he added. "Recognizing that automation is a permanent part of our economy, we must allow for it."

Bagdon, Southern regional director of the Bureau of Labor Statistics here since January 1948, quoted numerous examples of new methods and inventions producing new industries, and new areas of old ones that have created far more jobs than have been displaced.

PLANNING URGED

He also pointed out that the people whose old jobs were taken over or made unnecessary by automation and other technical progress often were not prepared to assume the new positions created.

"We can't accept the fact that automation will bring unemployment and stagnation," but business, industry and communities must plan and prepare to meet the changes it will make.

DIVERSIFICATION A KEY

Communities must diversify their economic bases. There must be retraining and other programs to fit for new jobs those left jobless, he told the group.

Atlanta, long a transportation and trade center, is now a fast-growing manufacturing center.

The city has had a 40 per cent increase in manufacturing in recent years, Bagdon said. This growth includes a 70 per cent rise in the manufacture of durable goods, compared to a national increase of only 17 per cent. However, Atlanta still shows a lack in this field, Bagdon said.

"There will be no numerical shortage of workers, but will we have workers trained for the needs?"

MUST START EARLY

Bagdon, who taught economics at the University of Chicago before joining the bureau, stressed the need for the development of training programs, on-the-job apprenticeship and effective placement service.

"We must start with students" at about the junior high level, he said, "and get them to take science, mathematics and English courses that will prepare

Drives 3 Miles to Finish Killing Himself

PHENIX CITY, Ala. (AP)—A man who killed his wife and teen-age daughter but bungled a suicide attempt finally took his own life early Monday while standing in front of police headquarters.

Severely injured by an earlier shotgun blast, Paul N. Perkins, 40, yelled incoherently and pointed toward his home, then killed himself before police could stop him. He had driven three miles to the station from his home. Coroner John Anthony said Perkins killed his wife, Ruth, 39, and his daughter, Paulette, 18, in their Phenix City home early Monday then turned a shotgun on himself, but survived.

Then, said Police Sgt. Paul Blades, the man raced to police headquarters in his car, stood outside and put the shotgun to his head and fired again.

Blades said neighbors had called police after the shooting at the Perkins home and a car was en route there when the man arrived at the station. The sergeant said the car met Perkins speeding toward headquarters, but did not stop him because it was on an emergency call.

The motive for the shootings was not disclosed.

Nigeria to Own Line

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The Nigerian national shipping line will be wholly owned and operated by the government beginning Sept. 1. Transport Minister R.A. Njoku said the government will buy up the 49 per cent of shares outstanding now held by two British firms.

SEE AMERICA BEST...BY CAR

This one-day vacation-in-miniature includes the scene of America's first gold rush... Georgia's lovely highlands of green woods and cool water... and a view of one of the South's great battlefields.
Total miles from Atlanta: 218

(CLIP AND SAVE THIS TOUR)

"There's gold in the hills," said the mint assayer, striving to restrain the Dahlonega miners from moving to richer diggings in the West. There's still gold in the hills, in a wide variety, for today's family-on-wheels.

Learning of Georgia's history from Indian times to today is one type of treasure you and your youngsters will acquire on this drive from Atlanta—as you enjoy the scenic beauty of 600,000-acre Chattahoochee National Forest and the fine state parks provided for your pleasure.

Gold? Sure! You may try your luck at panning. And you don't even have to bring your own pan! Start at the junction of Peach-

Much of the city now fronts on Lake Lanier. At hand are sailing marinas, beaches, boating and overnight campsites. On a busy weekend, 15,000 boats churn the blue waters of Lanier, where once the Chattahoochee River followed its meandering course. Drive out North Green Street to Route 60, within view of watery fingers of Lake Lanier, and continue north into the hills. Approaching Dahlonega, you drive along the Chestnut River.

71m. WOODY GAP. a delightful place to open a picnic lunch. The Gap overlooks the YAHOLA VALLEY, with Dahlonega visible in the distance below. An even better view is seen from the top of the fire-tower, reached on a mile hike up the trail on BLACK MOUNTAIN.

77m. DAHLONEGA, where the first major gold rush began in 1828. Ten years later the Government built a mint and coined $6,000,000 worth of gold before the War. At the Gold Museum, in the old Crown Mountain Mine machine shop, six blocks from Dahlonega Square, you can try your hand at panning in the sluice box. Roll up your sleeves, help yourself to a panful of dirt, exercise patience and you cannot fail to end up with a few flecks of ore. The museum is not a commercial venture, but an outstanding community project recreating the spirit of the past. Displays include coins minted at Dahlonega, nuggets and the old ore-crushing machine. For the real old-time mining spirit, head for the hills of Crown Mountain and try panning in the creeks.

From Dahlonega, scenic drives lead deep into the NATIONAL FOREST. Among several loops, try this one:

79m. Spur road to CANE CREEK FALLS, one mile left, a beautiful natural waterfall and recreation spot. Although now the site of Camp Glisson (Methodist Conference grounds), visitors are welcome to use the swimming pool, bathhouse and picnic tables. Visiting hours are listed on the sign posted on the U.S. 19 turnoff.

86m. STONE PILE GAP, junction State Route 60 and U.S. 19, at the memorial mound to Princess Trahlyta. According to legend, the Cherokee princess retained her youth and beauty from the magic waters of the spring on CEDAR MOUNTAIN. Follow the custom and drop a stone on the grave—it may bring good luck. For many years the Creeks and Cherokees lived in these hills, and fought bloody battles for them. Follow Route 60 along the flank of CEDAR MOUNTAIN.

93m. SUCHES. This little town in the hills was the home of Arthur Woody, the ranger who devoted much of his life to restocking North Georgia with deer. Turn right on State Route 180.

99m. LAKE WINFIELD SCOTT, a beautiful lake fed by clear mountain streams, where you can enjoy fishing, boating, swimming or horseback riding. This National Forest recreation area has cottages for rent and excellent camping sites. Just beyond lies VOGEL STATE PARK, one of Georgia's most popular state parks close to the Appalachian Trail. A lovely drive between these areas takes you through Wolf Pen Gap and Sosebee Cove, set aside by the Forest Service as a memorial to Ranger Woody. The pioneer forester loved the great tulip poplars and wildflowers, which are now preserved for the enjoyment of all.

105m. Junction. Turn South on U.S. Routes 19-129. If the hour is still early, or if you are on a weekend trip, you could drive North to BRASSTOWN BALD, the highest point in Georgia (with a new paved road to the summit), or to ANNIE RUBY FALLS, deep in the woods. On your one-day trip, turn South on Route 19.

108m. NEELS GAP. According to Cherokee myth, the Gap is the abode of Walasi, the Great Frog, leader of the ancient "Animal Council." Until the road was completed in 1925 it was known as Frogtown Gap and was crossed only by the Frogtown Indian Trail.

130m. DAHLONEGA. Have another look at Lumpkin County Court House, one of the oldest in the state, or at North Georgia College, located on the site of the old U.S. Mint. Stay on U.S. Route 19 and continue through DAWSONVILLE.

184m. ROSWELL, a community of notable ante-bellum homes. Turn West on State Route 120, to U.S. 41, then Northwest around MARIETTA.

199m. KENNESAW MOUNTAIN NATIONAL BATTLEFIELD PARK, commemorating the fields where Sherman struck in his first frontal attack on Atlanta in June, 1864, but failed to penetrate the Confederate lines. He then resumed his flanking movements. You can drive the paved road to the crest of scenic Kennesaw Mountain, passing trailside exhibits, earthworks and cannon. All these will add to your understanding of the tremendous Battle of Atlanta, really a sequence of maneuvers, engagements and sieges. Return to Atlanta on New Marietta Road (U.S. Route 41), leading into the Northwest Expressway.

218m. ATLANTA. At the end of this day's adventure your youngsters may have some gold in their pockets to recall the treasures of the hills. But the whole family will have shared the fun of going places together and learning about America. And the next time you look at the dome on the State Capitol you will recognize the golden surface as a treasure of Dahlonega, presented by the people of the mountains.
